The objective of most board games is to be the first one to reach the end or to be the player with the most points. However, in this game the end is just the beginning and no one keeps score. So what is the point? Why play the game if you can never win? You will discover that the satisfaction will not come from winning the game; the satisfaction comes from how you play the game.

Guidelines: On your turn, spin the wheel. Then move your car along the path for the appropriate amount of spaces. Always move forward in the direction of the arrows, and remember... there is no looking back. Every move you make counts, and the choices you make will dictate what happens to you further down the path. Each space represents a challenge you must overcome in order to move forward. The challenges will test your friendships, integrity, and beliefs. Usually board games include a list of rules, but in this game you set the boundraries and guidelines for your journey through high school. Your turn ends once you have surpassed your obstacle.

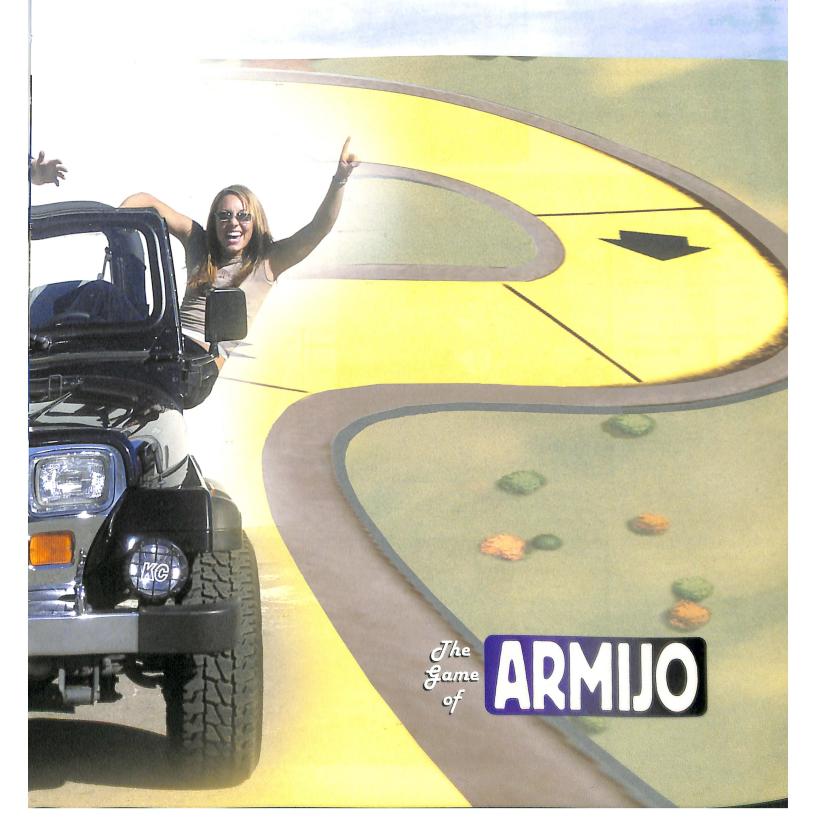

We are all on the same square when the game begins. As we proceed down the path, the choices we make will lead us in different directions. Sometimes we step out of our comfort zone and try new things. We try our hand at playing sports and join clubs to get involved. We attempt to make connections with people and strive to better our knowledge through learning from experiences. When we make mistakes, we are forced to reassess our strategies. Other times we are lucky when we spin the wheel and end up advancing farther than we ever dreamed we could. It does not matter whether we choose to be trail blazers or follow in the footsteps of another, the spaces that we occupy make us all players in the game of Armijo.

Billes Hife

The ENERGIZERS were the ones who stood out from the crowd. They could be seen walking down the path, embodying the essence of camaraderie at the school. They were the ones that pumped up the crowd with their shining spirit and they were the ones who were known for their unique personalities. Without the ENERGIZERS to brighten our days, school would have been uneventful and dull. The ENERGIZERS made the road through high school much more enjoyable.

A Day in the Life of...

"Move it! Let's go, let's go!" These were the shouts that rang out across the hustle and bustle of the parking lot every morning. From the time you were a freshmen to your graduating year, Mrs. Smith's familiar voice alerted students of the beginning of yet another day...

Each student rolled into the parking lot and received early morning greetings with an ID check. Everyone knew they had to be inside the gates by the 8:05 deadline or else Mrs. Smith would lock them out! Chris Cortez said, "Worrying about turning in my homework is what gets me out of bed everyday."

With one day down and only four more to go, the weekend appeared to be in sight. As the final minutes ticked away, students readied themselves for a mad rush to the parking lot.

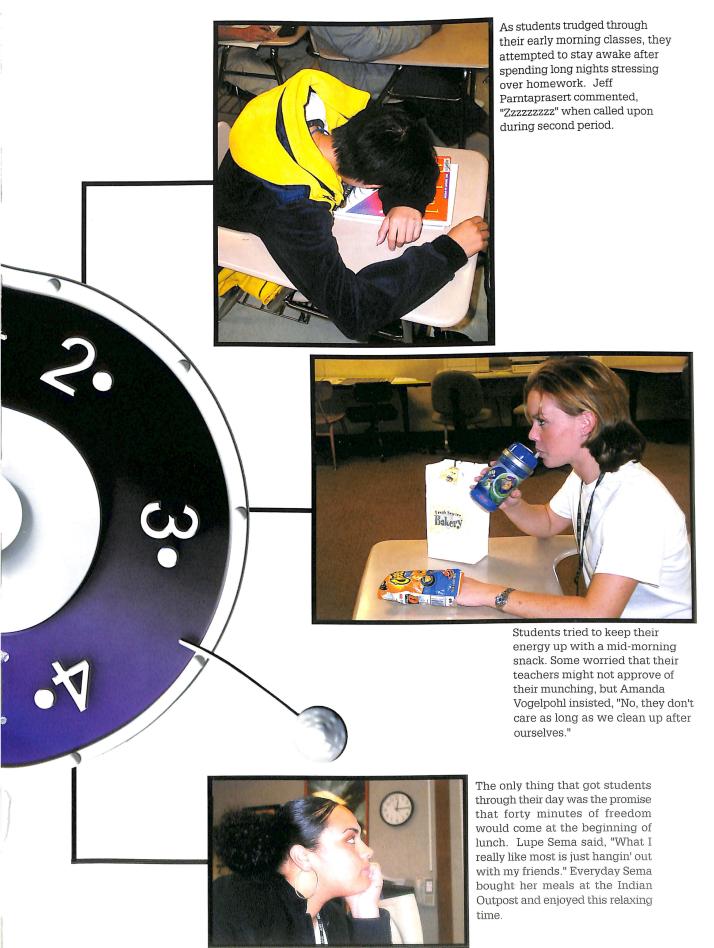

Lorell Norton exclaimed, "When the last bell rings, I feel as if I have just won the lottery!"

As the somber bells tolled, students reluctantly made their way to the dreaded fifth period class. As Justin Soohoo-Westdyk sadly watched older students leave, he commented, "They are so lucky. I wish I could leave after fourth period too."

Gettin' Real For Homecoming

The crowd cheered as the homecoming floats rolled through Armijo's football stadium. This year's theme was reality T.V. shows. Freshmen had Survivor, the sophomores had The Osbournes, the juniors had M.T.V. Made, and the seniors had American Idol.

We were amazed to see the freshmen pull together and present a spectacular presentation to the crowd. They broke free from the usual freshmen tradition of coming in last in the competition, and came in second place. The islanders survived their first year.

The sophmores did a great rendition of The Osbournes, without the swearing and family fights. Although the sophomores came in last place, they put on a great show that made the crowd laugh.

The juniors got MADE! With their weeks of hard work and determination, they showed the school that anyone can achieve their dreams and get made. Although the juniors came in fourth place, they were truly the crowd's favorite.

The seniors; what else is there to say about them? They already are American Idols. They had starstudded appearances by Kelly Clarkson, Ruban Studdard, and the infamous Keith, singing "Like A Virgin." The judges, played by Chris Roa, Jenny Carion, and Tynisha Williams, played their parts well. They made you hate Simon, love Paula, and want to hug Randy.

The homecoming floats were a huge success. They put on a great show that entertained the crowd between the junior varsity and the varsity games.

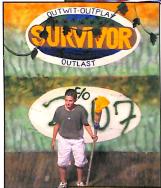

Taylor Thompson is tossed in the air during the spirit march. The cheerleaders joined the march to pump up excitment for the game.

"I liked how everyone was cheering for us," stated sophomore Daniel Dam, when asked about the sophomore float.

When asked about the best part of their float, junior Corina Cornelius commented, "seeing our class come together, and the crowd cheering while we were giggling.

Brent Chikowski remembers, "going to all the meetings and working on the float," as the most memorable part of Football Homecoming 2003.

When senior Chris Roa was asked about his favorite moment of the homecoming floats, he quickly responded, "sitting and dancing with Jenny Carion. I love you Jenny!'

According to Senior and FFA member Lacy Blanc, "the best part about the float was getting to show everyone what FFA is all about...l am NOT a 'hick'."

Josh Levig's "when I got to strip some, and 'Keith.'

When recalling what it was like to be voted the freshmen Princess, Jessica Toolson commented, "It was really exciting and everyone was congratulating me after I won,"

When asked about winning junior Prince, Jazz Burney replied, "It was very extravogant having everyone cheering for me. I liked it because it gave me a chance to show my stylish cup off."

When Maria Ramirez was asked what she thought about winning sophomore Princess, she replied, "I got to do something I've always wanted to do and made it this far."

Matt Garcia remembers the Football Homecoming and states, "It was an honor to be nominated twice and win twice, while at Armijo. I was especially glad to win King."

as she is named Football Homecoming Queen. She laters admits, "The best part of winning was having my best friend Lacy Blanc crown me. Being part of the court was an honor, especially as a senior and being with all of my friends."

Cern Chow Saeteurn says, "Winning was really cool sauce! I didn't think I would win, but I did."

Maquita Lewis helps fix-up Ben Devini before the morning assembly. When asked about the whole event, Lewis replied, "Honestly, I would rather watch, because being 'behind the scenes,' I missed everything that happened before I came out."

And the winners are...

Football Homecoming was approaching. While the football players were getting ready for the game, the four classes got ready for the float competition, the nominees for the homecoming court were anxiously awaiting to walk down the runway to present themselves to the crowd.

Each class went through a series of preliminary voting to reach the final nominees. Once the nominees were announced. preparations for the homecoming assembly were made. Early in the morning, the nervous nominees gathered in the transformed gym to make their walk down the runway. Voting took place the following day for each class' final vote.

To show that each of them were already winners a special lunch was held to honor the homecoming court nominees. It was not long until the final verdict would be announced at half-time during the varsity game. Dressed to their best, all the nominees looked amazing.

As the cars rolled around the track, the escorted nominees were presented and then waited for the results. Sophomore attendant, Nishi Trewn said, "The whole round up of the people was really exciting. My stomach dropped as they were about to announce the winner." Although only a selected few took the titles of the homecoming court, all left in high spirits in remembrance of being part of the nominated football homecoming court.

"People might pick a person that doesn't deserve to win homecoming king or queen."

What is the worst thing about homecoming week?

"All the girls think that they're going to win!"

Posing by her Lexus that was given to her by her uncle, Maryn O'young said " The best thing about my car is that it's fast, small, and easy to drive".

Melissa Ignacio lounges in her 1995 red camero. Melissa's car was the object of every teenager's dream.

Leaning up against his Camaro, Gustavo Vera said, "I love my car because it's unique."

Senior Stephanie Munson said, "I like the looks I get, because my car is a classic." She looked classic as she took this picture on Halloween.

Phil Cunningham said, "The best thing about my car is that it's so fast."

Ryan Mcfadden, in his first year of having his license, drove to school everyday. Ryan said, "I love having my car. because I have so much freedom."

Cousins, Chris and Mike Engel, lean against their trucks with attitude. Chris Engel said, " There's nothing really special to it, but it's mine."

Let's Go For A Ride!

Whether it was a yellow pinto or an H2, everyone was proud to own his or her vehicle. Some were fortunate enough to have their cars given to them, while others had to work for a set of wheels. And you can't forget the unfortunate underclassmen that got to watch the cars pull in and out of the parking lot. Freshmen Thomas Brenner said "Not having a car sucks because you have to depend on other people for rides all the time."

For many students, getting a driver's license was a pivotal point in their teenage years. One thing that new and old drivers have in common is the tedious task of finding a parking spot. When there are none available, they create their own. The parking lot was filled with a diverse selection of cars. From lifted trucks, to rice rockets, to the everyday hunk of junk, everyone felt a sense of freedom while driving their car, no matter what the style was. Jamie White said, "My car was given to me by my parents, I like to drive, even though I have to take my little sister everywhere"

The only downside to driving to school was the parking lot mayhem. Everyone trying to squeeze through the gates at once was a daily routine after the 6th period bell rang.

Jamie Hammil, James Engell, and Ted Nierhake stand proudly by their Mustangs. Jamie Hammel said, " My favorite thing about my car is that we go fast."

"I like the '64 Impala's because I could put 'em on switches and BIG rims."

Junior Nicole Hocke had one piece of lunchtime knowledge to pass on, she said "It's always okay to lick the wrapper of bean burritos."

Junior, Jayme Clemente said that her favorite part of lunch was "talking with friends." Many students agreed with her.

Senior, Ashley Lafon, said her favorite part of lunch was, "Eating AND hanging out!" One of the best parts of lunch was definitely that everybody got a chance to get some food!

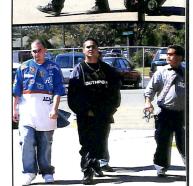

immediately exploded with talking and laughter as the bell sounded at the end of fourth period. Lunch was the forty-minute stretch that students were given to hang out with friends, eat some food, and talk about how their day was going. "Lunchtime was the best part of my day becuase I got to hang out with friends and goof off," said junior, Emily Gutierrez.

Although, for many, a good portion of lunch was spent waiting in lines to purchase food, most agreed that lunch was still the highlight of their day. "I like lunch becuase its a good time to talk and hangout with my friends," said freshmen, Randy Ferentheil.

Lunch was spent in a variety of ways around campus. Some students spent time under the lunch overhang, while others enjoyed their forty minutes of freedom hanging out and listening to music amongst the cars in the parking lot. Junior, Jose Hernandez thought that lunch was "The best part of the day."

Lunch seemed to end almost as soon as it had begun each day, but regardless of the time limit, lunch always provided lots of laughter and good times for the students.

What food do you wish we had for lunch?

"No, because too many girls complain about them getting hurt.

"Yes, because all people should be able to play whatever sport they want."

-Sean Smith '06

Do you think powder puff should be a real sport? Why?

"It should, because girls play."

The junior varsity girls cover the field as they try to get open for their teammates.

Switch It Up

"Blue forty-two! Blue forty-two! Hut! Hut! Hike!" On the night of December third, the freshmen battled the sophomores while the juniors took on the seniors. The students decided to switch roles. The girls tackled each other on the field while the boys dressed up as cheerleaders and cheered their teams from the sidelines.

The crowd went wild during the junior varsity powder puff game. The freshmen and sophomores were neck in neck throughout the whole game. Even though they ended up tying each other a seven to seven, both teams did a great job at defending their class.

The varsity game between the juniors and the seniors was the highlight of the night. The crowd favored the seniors, who were expecting to win. Instead, the juniors pummeled them. It got to the point where the seniors started bringing guys onto the field to try and help their team. They gave it a good shot, but it didn't compare to the juniors' outstanding teamwork. The juniors came out on top, ending with a score of twenty-one to zero.

Powder puff was a huge success because so many got involved. Even the spectators in the crowd had a great time. It also gave the students a chance to switch roles and allowed the girls to get down and dirty on the field while the guys turned into well-spirited cheerleaders rooting for their team. Powder puff was an annual event that everyone looked forward to.

The freshman and sophomore powder puff teams show their good sportsmanship by slapping hands at the end of the game. They tied each other at seven to seven.

Stephanie Lanza and Mayra Garcia get ready to go onto the field. The senior girls had only two practices, which made it difficult for them to defend their winning title.

Emotions run high on the sidelines. The junior girls shouted out encourageing words that motivated their team members.

Wasileh Karaouni and others laughed as they watched their teammates from the sidelines. They found humor in the fact that they had boys playing on their team.

The freshmen watch their team from the sidelines. They were surprised at how well they played against the sophomores.

The freshmen and the sophomores set up their offense on the field as the sophomores hike the ball. Once the ball was put into play the girls got vicious.

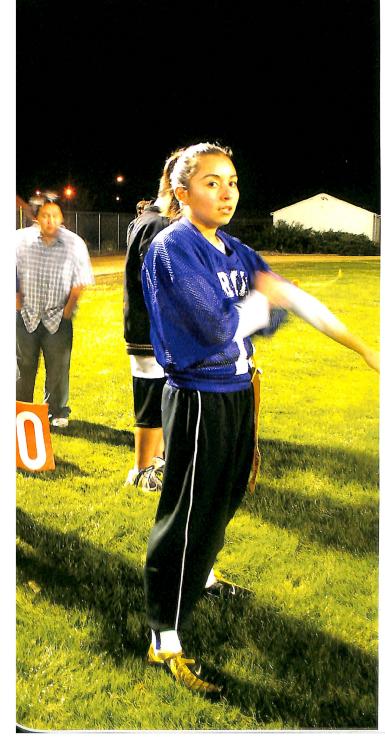

Matt Garcia calls a play during a time-out session. Down by 14 at the end of the first half, the seniors were looking toward their coaches for leadership.

The junior varsity team swarms around the referee as he explains his call to them. The refs were there to make sure that the game was being played fairly.

Reversing Roles

"Grab your partner and dosey doe"! That seemed to be the thing to do on Friday night at the Sadie Hawkins dance. It was the girls` turn to ask that special someone to sweep her off her feet, and the girls didn't waste any time getting that certain guy.

Getting "Hitched" was a fun way to pass the time for couples in awe. They were allowed to pick a ceremony that ranges anywhere from ten seconds to ten minutes. We really didn't decide to get married, it just seemed like a fun thing to do", said Junior Apple Castillpo. When she was asked about her eternal bind to Junior Josh Sachman.

The refreshment table served as a cool-down spot for the couples hot off the dance floor. The gym was crowded with all the matching couples swinging their hips and showing off their moves to their favorite songs.

The Sadie Hawkins dance was a huge hit with the students here at Armijo. It was an awesome way to spend your Friday night. Magic was in the air as the students danced the night away with their special someone.

Kelsie Brucia dances with her date Chris Roa. Brucia said that "The best thing about Sadies was the outfits because we went shopping in San Francisco.' The couple looked very unique in their Hooters shirts.

More than just...

A face in the Crowd

Get inside the minds of ARMIJO fans...

Britiney Glespie was a senior who came to a lot of school functions. "I go to games because it is my last year of high school and I want to get the full experience before I go to college. I want to hang with my friends because we will probably be in different parts of the US next year."

Alvin Moore went to games frequently to have fun and get loud. "My favorite thing about going to games is being able to represent the school."

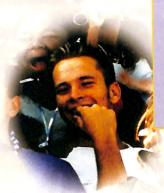

"The best thing about rallies is seeing everbody coming together. Usually everyone does their own thing, but at rallies everyone comes together," said Terrande Corne. Carne was easy to see in the crowd because of his spirited outfit

DeVenna Ballard came to the games and rallies for one purpose, "I like to show my school spirit in any kind of way. Every Friday I put on purple and gold and decorate my shoes and hair. At the games I take my pom poms and sit will all my friends in a row. We just sit there and yell."

Kimberty Rush got loud and rowdy at school events. Rush stated, "Ilike going to games so I can spend time with my friends. When I'm there, the band gets me pumped up when they play the Indian Chant."

Who could forget those funfilled days when school spirit shined across campus. Students, decked in the colors of AHS pride, passed friends on the way to class and asked, "Are you going to the rally after school?" or shouted down the hallway, "Will I see you at the game tonight?" These dedicated students were the ones who made up the crowd that was present at ever school event.

At first glance, the crowd may have seemeed...well, a little out-of control. However, if given a second look, the crowd was actually a collage of laughter, commradery, and emotions. Each person in the crowd added to the intensity of the game. Students arrived with a certain mindset so that when thay climbed into the bleachers, they became more than just your average spectators... they morphed into die-hard fans! Whether the students knew it or not, their support was greatly appreciated by the players in the game. "When alot of people come to the game it gets you juiced up and gives you a bigger reason to win. When I see people I know in the crowd I feel special," said Fou Cheim, a football player.

What's the Difference?

Long ago Martin Luther King Jr. dreamed of a society beyond judging people by their appearances. He believed that diversity was a good thing, because then everyone would understand each others differences. Once society was able to over look color and nationality, people could focus on the value of people's personalities and ideas.

Our campus was the definition of diversity. In the begining it was challenging to make friends outside of our own groups what made us reluctant to reach out to people that were different from us. But we soon realized that aside from our customs and heritage, we were not so different after all. Students of all ethnicities formed great friendships as they discovered that they shared similar interests and ambitions. Diversity was what made up the friendships on campus that would last for eternity.

I Like the Way You Wear that Right There

One thing everyone definitely chattered about: Fashion! Students expressed themselves through many ways, including what they wore each day. Every morning, students rummaged through their closets, drawers, and even under their bed, to choose something appealing to wear to school. For some people, it was a breeze to choose the ideal outfit. For others, choosing the best fit was not only a struggle, but very timeconsuming. As you walked around campus, you saw a wide range of color and a variety of fashions. The common brand names roaming through campus seemed to have been Roca Wear. Phat Farm. Sean John.

Ecko, Baby Phat, Johnny Blaze, Hollister, Quicksilver, and more. Besides the cool threads, your fit was not complete without a pair of the bare necessities...shoes! The popularity of Chuck Taylors continued to upsurge as many new styles and colors came out. From Jordans to Nikes, Adidas to Vans; shoes were like the toppings of your ice cream...they made the fit complete! Shoes complimented your wardrobe from the bottom-up, and changing your shoes could change the appearance of your ensemble. Once the class dismissal was announced, the halls gave the impressions of fashion run ways.

Sophomore, Deviny Ortega, dresses herself in only the best threads. "I can't help it! I fall in love with clothes so quick. I guess you can call me a shopabolic" Her Coach purse was the most expensive at $152.00.

Sophomore, Kyle Hopkins likes clothes that are comfortable. "If I see something I like, I'll get it," said Hopkins. Hopkins wore good looking clothes that had a casual style.

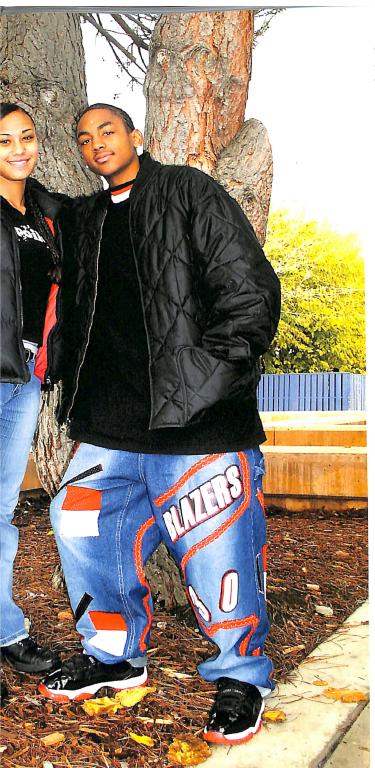

Senior, Amanda Alcantara, poses with junior, Jazz Burney, on this particularly chilly morning. Puff jackets and Jordans kept many styling down the halls.

Freshmen Gabriel Dimalanta and Julie Phan like to make a fashion statement. They wore sharplooking jackets and accessorized with necklaces or new shoes.

Sophomore Rimah Karaouni shops whenever she gets bored with the clothes she has. "I mostly shop at Express, Wet Seal, Macy's, and Forever 21," said Karaouni.

Hot weather meant beach trips and tons of colorful Flipflops. ($2 - $5)

Hats gave personality and flare to an everyday look. ($12 - $18)

Scarves and gloves were major essentials when it came to rainy days and wintery storms. ($7 - $24)

Kikui nuts and rose-bud pins accessorized a simple t-shirt and jean fit. ($7)

Through Thick and Thin

Everyday was stressful with homework and preparing for tests, but it helped to know that your friends could always relate. They knew what made us laugh, as well as what made us cry. They knew our likes, dislikes, dreams, and fears. From large crews and cliques, to the one person you could always count on to bring out the best in you, our friends made it easier to cope with our daily obstacles.

Friends shared many similarities, but just enough differences to collaborate and learn from one another. "We enjoy talking on the phone and comparing import cars," said Beeh Marie Cali of her friends Amber Jualo and Chris Tenario. Friends were always supportive when it came to dealing with the dilemmas of school, work, and life. Everyone had a friend to help them get past the situations life threw unexpectedly.

Friendships boosted our self-confidence and enhanced our personalities. Friends walked around campus laughing at photographs, movies, and inside jokes. Everyone pinpointed memories that included the prominent friendships they established throughout the school year. The friendships that made an impact on our lives will be remembered and cherished forever.

The Heat is On!

This year there were a lot of students with spirit. All of the spirit caused for extra intensity at the games and events in which we faced our rivals. "My favorite part of the rivalry tradition is the mock funeral and when the band marches down the hall, it gets everyone excited," said Junior, Melissa Ferentheil.

When most students thought of rivalries the thirty-eight year feud between our number one rival, Fairfield High, was always the first thing that came to mind. The multi-sport conflict brought students together to cheer on our teams. One of this years highlights was our second consecutive varsity win over the Falcon's football team. Senior Football Player, Fou Saeteurn said that the football team "focused on what other teams did most and prepared to take it away from them." In order to prepare for big games.

Our newest competitor and another big rival were the Rodriguez teams. Although the tug-of-war between us and Rodriguez was still somewhat new this year, both schools rose to the occasion and athletes tried their best at whatever event they faced each other. Junior football player, Chris Michael thought that "One day the Armijo-Rodriguez rivalry will be as fierce as the Armijo-Fairfield game, but the Armijo-Fairfield game will always have an added element, making it historic."

Whether it was rivals we have faced for almost half a century or rivals we have faced for less than five years Armijo teams always did an excellent job fighting their rivals and Armijo students did an excellent job supporting their school.

Biology teacher, Mr. Facque, said that "Even though it doesn't seem like it now, over time the Armijo-Rodriguez rivalry will become bigger than the rivalry with Fairfield." This was the first year that we were in a different division than Fairfield.

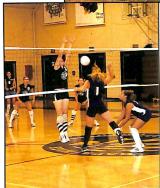

Salonika Owens, said "When you are a player its intense and you try your hardest. You really put your heart into it." About games against our rivals.

The water polo girls got extra creative with their cheers before games against rivals.

Sophomore soccer player, Taylor Elze, said "The rivalry between Armijo and Fairfield is not as big in soccer as it is in Football."

Although rival games in volleyball didn't attract as many fans as in some other sports, the girls still felt extra spirited for these games.

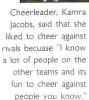

Eman Amad smashes her opponent while playing against the Rodriguez Mustangs. She said "It was easy because they don't know very much about the game and weren't very forceful."

During big games the basketball players got pumped up by the A-Team who cheered from the crowd at each game.

Cheerleader, Kamra Jacobs, said that she liked to cheer against rivals becuase "I know a lot of people on the other teams and its fun to cheer against people you know.

Senior Lacy Towner goes through the procedures before she can give blood; this meant having her iron levels tested. Towner said, "Giving blood isn't that bad, it feels good to help people."

Everyone that gives blood must get their arm swabbed with iodine. The skin needs to be clean so the needle doesn't carry germs into the body.

The nurse prepares to put the needle into Jill Carlson's arm. Carlson said, "I was nervous before she put the needle in but I knew it was not going to hurt." Carlson was a litte shaky after she gave blood but this did not bother her.

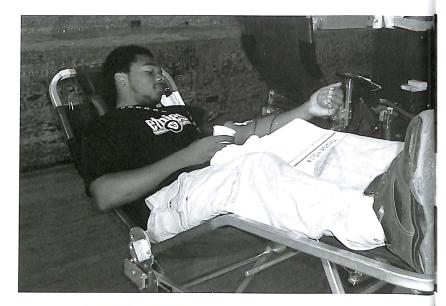

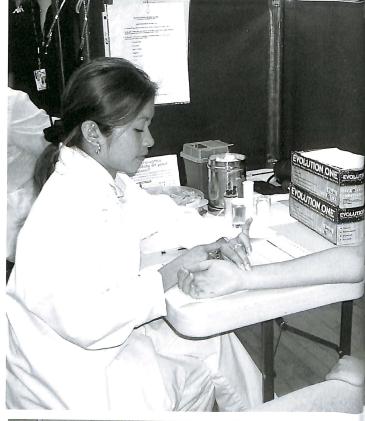

When you are done giving blood you hold your arm up so the bleeding will stop. Senior, Jayme Kim, did this happily.

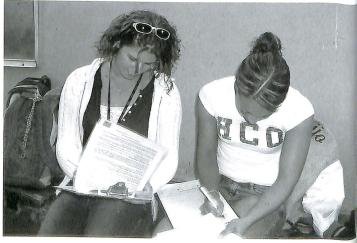

Senior Frank Abney relaxes and waits for the blood bag to fill up. It was a good feeling knowing that your blood might save the life of another person.

Lending a Helping Vein

It was the day that students across campus waited for the arrival of a pass to excuse then from class. Many students, nervous and green in the face, headed to the small gym with pass in hand. Once they arrived they filled out paper work while dreading the fatal prick of their finger. "I wanted to get free doughnuts and I wanted to help people," said senior Anne Vonaphosy. With the current events that went on with our country, some people gave blood to help their country. Others gave blood for the soul purpose of getting out of class, but everyone agreed that the best part was the free food from the famous grandma at the snack table. "My favorite part of Giving blood was the Juice."

said senior Jenny Carion. For some students this was their first time giving blood, but others had given blood many times before. "I have Given blood three times before, I give blood twice a year," said senior Tynisha Williams. The thought of getting the blood sucked out of you can make you queasy. It's not the sort of things you see everyday For the students that felt lightheaded they made sure to drink their juice and eat their cookies. "I felt light headed and weak but it wasn't that bad, it felt good to give blood!" said senior Jill Carlson. Students pulled through together and did a fantastic job with helping their country and community by giving blood.

Senior Annie Vongphosy gets her iron tested and her vitals taken. You cannot give blood until the nurses are sure that you are strong enough to give blood.

Senior Aaron Scott finishes giving blood and and the nurses begin to to pull the needle out. "I felt a little dizzy after I gave blood."

How do you feel about giving blood? Would you ever do it?

"The only time I'd give blood is for Kurt Cobain so he'd live again and play the quitar with me onstage."

-Katie Brownell '06

"I have been been giving blood since the 10th grade and I do it both times every year. I mean...I love giving blood...I mean hey!"

-Trenea Moore '04

The drums are often thought of as the backbone of a band. Sophomore, Alexis Garrett said, "Playing the drums is something that really gets me pumped!"

Jason Simmons, a sophomore at Fairfield High said "You can get really close with somebody and share things through making music together."

Converse were a common accessory for concert goers in Fairfield. Junior, Gail Delgado said she liked converse because, "They are comfortable and come in lots of fun colors!"

Sophomore, Daniel Ayer, described his music as "very energetic." This was a common way to describe music for students.

When asked if going to different schools affected the chemistry of his band, Fairfield Senior, Scottie Reynolds, said "It doesn't affect us, but it would be better if Brad went to Fairfield."

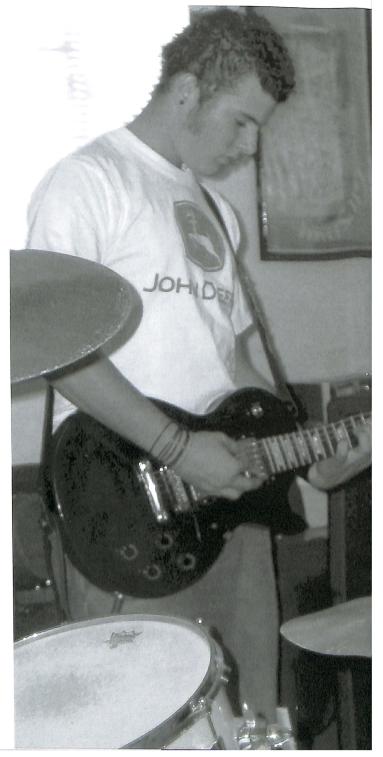

Dustin Peasley, said that he wanted to play the guitar becuase, "It feels great to learn a song by my favorite artists."

The guys from "Red Arrows Fly" liked to jam after school on weekdays, but they all agreed that their favorite time to play together was at shows.

Junior, Brad

Brad thought of music as "an outlet of energy and emotion."

"They can't be pop-punk and they have to know how to play their instruments."

"Originality because nobody wants to listen to the same stuff, and at least a little talent."

-Carmella Southward '07

What do you think makes a good band?

"They have to have meaningful lyrics and a good drummer (a band is nothing without a good drummer)."

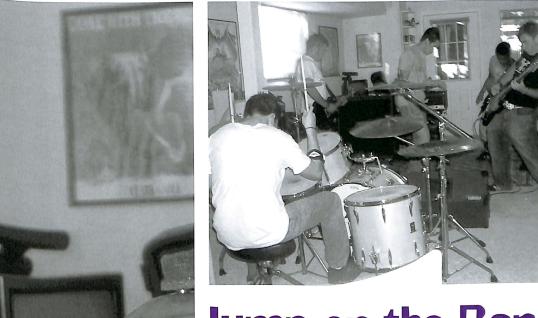

-Kayla Tobin '06

"Having a SEXY lead singer like me!"

-Mike Johnson '04

The members of "Red Arrows Fly" had a common view on the benefits of being in a band. Junior, Brad Hanks, thought of music as "Something to express yourself through."

Jump on the Band Wagon

One of the things that you first notice about Armijo is its diversity, not just in the people, but in the music the people listen to and make. Many students enjoyed spending their free time as a part of a band or music group. Junior, Ghassan Yaser said, "After watching so many of my friends enjoy spending time in a band it really makes me want to get involved with music as well."

The bonus of having such a large school is the wide variety of music genres represented by the many bands found on campus. The number of students participating in bands seemed to be greater than ever, which proved to be a huge plus for students who liked to attend local concerts. "There were so many quality bands this year that there was a concert at least once a week!" Said junior, Leah Tharp.

The various bands each brought something special to the table with their lyrics. Each band had something different to say, and expressed this through their music. Junior, Bobby Singharath said that lyrics were a large part of his music, because "You don't really get to express what is in your mind that often, but with lyrics you get to let it all out."

Although most bands that form in high school don't last for very long after graduation, students continued to make their own music and had a great time doing it.

Working Hard 4 the Money

After seven long dreadful hours of school and extra curriculum activities, one expected to find students at home relaxing. The truth was many of these students tried to earn big bucks instead. Every person loved money and all that it could buy, but the only way for teens to earn it was by holding a part time job. From clothing departments to fast food restaurants to music stores, students were willing to work hard for it at any place that offered money. When the last bell rang, some students jetted home for the latest episode of MTV's "Dismissed," while others headed off to make a little extra cash at their part-time job. Organization and responsibility was key to maintaining school and work. "I love being independent and not asking my parents for money", said Junior Paula Malit. They were recognized for their keen workmanship qualities. These attributes helped shape students into young adults, and prepared them to face the real world.

Rosan De La Cruz spends her weekends at the movies. "This job has helped me make new freinds, gain expierences and money to spend," said De la Cruz. Her first priority is school, then work and last friends.

"I would say 'Hot Dog On a Stick' 'cause them hats are all bad and they have to churn the batter and look funny."

Warren Chew waits for the blender to mix up a delicious stawberry and banana smoothie. "My parents support really helps me balance my school and work," said Warren. Besides school and working, Chew plays both water polo and wrestling.

Vishalini Prasad picks out a nice perfume for a customer to smell. "The disadvatage of working on the weekends is you never get to sleep in!," said Vishalini. Her favorite perfume at the gallery is Burberry Weekend.

Jennifer James cleaned away a table at Monsoon Burger. "Ever since I was three my dream job was to become an actress", said James. She has gone to some auditions for commercials.

Dao Tran hands a customer a pair of new airforce ones. "I love working at Sheikh because I get discounts on the latest shoes", said Dao. Her favorite shoes are white and red Air Jordans.

Justine Anderson counts the money at Anchor Blue. "It gets hard balancing school and work but my manager is understanding and lets me go home early for school work." When she was little she used to wear her mom's pink dress and pretend she was a waitress at Denny's.

Michelle Espiritu dips the corndog into the batter to make a delicous Hot Dog on a Stick for a customer. " Working makes me feel very independent," said Espiritu. Her first dream job was to have something to deal with in the nursing field.

"My little brother Javon makes toy guns out of Legos and hits me with 'em, and when me and my sister fight him, i get blamed!"

-Janelle Harper '05

"Me and my brother always fight over the phone. He always gets in trouble 'cause he be too loud!"

-Emmanuel "Moe" Cisneros '06

What do you and your siblings fight about? Who gets blamed?

"I fight with my younger sister about who she kicks it with."

-Brandon Rhodes '04

"Me and my brother Darnell fight 'casue he be talkin' mess and he always try to punk me!"

-Vedell Chew '07

Sulki and Bisna Flake smiled for the camera. They are very close and understanding to one another.

Ohana means Family

For many students, they didnt see their families until they came home from their tiring day at school. Other students had family members accompanying them to school each day. Simrun Sandhu and her younger brother, Ranjit enjoy attending school together. "I can watch over him at school and make sure that he is okay," said Simrun Sandhu. Waking up each morning to get ready for school brought chaos over the household. "I wake him up in the mornings. It takes my time away from getting ready," said Kristina Elder of her twin brother, Chris. Whether it was fighting over the bathroom, or debating who should get the last doughnut, there was always a story to Many siblings held characteristics that made it obvious that they were related.

When the dreaded first day of school rolled around, teachers recognized last names and asked about siblings. Teachers had a distinct perception of what to expect based on the performance and grades of the other sibling. Therefore, siblings were often quite competitive when it came to grades and Marcella Martinez had missed having her brother, Mike at school. She doesn't see him daily, now that he attends Sac State. "He had his friends watch out for me," said Marcella. As siblings grew older, they grew closer as well. Despite all the bickering and disputes, families always settled their differences. A life long history kept them united throughout everything.

George and Abe Silverio interact a handshake. Though they look alike, they have totally different personalities.

Xou and Fey pose together during passing period. "Its hard trying to get ready with a little brother who cares more about his hair than eating, but we respect each other's space," said Fey Saephan.

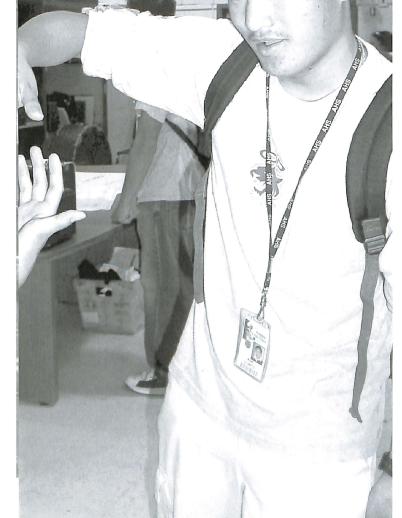

Vanessa Monroy and Rebecca Rangel are cousins who were constantly mistaken for twins. They were both in pageantry for the past two years.

We've Got Spirit, Yes

School pride was found everywhere on campus. Whether you were hanging out in the parking lot, walking across the campus during passing period, going to the rally during lunch, or attending the morning assembly; you could be sure that you would always find some purple and gold.

Homecoming was the time to find the most spirit, but not the only time. Participating in simple lunchtime activities was a great way to show school spirit, and a fun way to pass the time. "School pride makes me have school spirit. School spirit helps the athletic teams get ready for their games," stated junior Andrew Toolson when asked about his school pride.

Rallies were also a great way to get students involved and have school spirit. Our ASB president, Jamie Sales, put on lunchtime rallies in the annex quad about every other Friday. She got volunteers from the crowd to show their spirit by participating in the activities.

You could find school spirit everywhere you looked at the morning assembly for the football homecoming nominees. Since the theme for football homecoming was reality T.V. shows, the students in leadership made the assembly look like the setting of "The Bachelor". There were also hundreds of students who showed up to support their class nominees.

School spirit was alive and well, especially on Fridays and during the spirit week.

While she was painting spirit signs for the football game, sophomore Natalie Macias said, "School spirit makes me feel that I am school spirited and that I have no problem representing my school.

'If I could pick my own spirit day it would be called 'Food Day' because I'm gaining weight and feeling great!

-Elyse Lujan '06

could represent their favorite team.'

-Jillian Phillips '05

If you could pick your own spirit day, what would it be?

"We should have Mardi Gras Day so that we could 'give out beads'!"

-Jamie Sales '04

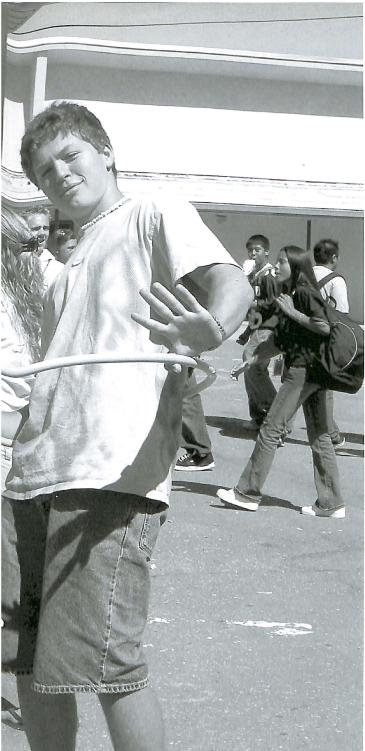

"I would make a day called 'No Work Day' because students need a day off from school work.

-Jerrid Frazier '07

Junior Andrew Toolson and many others participated in lunchtime activities in the annex quad.

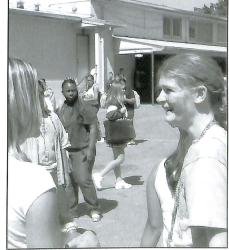

> As done in previous years, the R.O.T.C. performed at the morning assembly for football homecoming.

When Tracy Walker was asked what school spirit is, he said, "School spirit means to have pride for your school, spirit for your team, and a cheer for the bench because I always sit it."

Many students showed their school spirit by writing spirited messages on their car windows.

Senior Spirit Comissioner, Chelsea Stanton, who was also the Armijo Indian, promoted school spirit at the lunchtime rallies.

When senior Kevin Lanflisi was asked how he got the crowd involved at the morning assembly, he said, "I used my superhero ways to get everybody pumped up and I thought about Josh Levig doing his dance on the float, which gave me the energy to go on."

Matt Brock is plowing through the snow on his snow mobile. "It's a cool sport because it's fast paced."

Matt spent many of his winter weekends up at the snow.

Erik Pacchetti is making a jump off of a homemade ramp. "When I'm not at the track, I practice around my neighborhood." Erik devoted much of his time and energy to BMXing.

Despite the bad weather, Frank Cadenasso still skated. "I like skating in the morning because it is a time to hang out with my friends." The skaters always found time to practice together.

While practicing his varial heel flip, Chris Collart said, "I skateboard because it's one of my few talents." Skateboarding was an activity enjoyed by many students before and after school.

"I ride motorcross and I like it because it's fun and it gives you a rush."

-Chris Engell '05

"I like to play paintball because you get to travel and have a lot of fun!"

-Taylor Wickers '07

What extreme sport do you enjoy and why?

"I love wakeboarding. I have mastered the backflip faceplant!"

-Brandon Chadbourne '04

"I enjoy riding motorcross. My favorite part about it is hitting jumps."

-Austin Metcalf '06

Amber Jones is making a practice jump for her upcoming competition. "I love the adrenaline rush that I get from BMXing."
Amber was a competative rider who loved the challenge.

Thrill Seekers

There were always those that pushed the limit. For some, football, soccer, and basketball just were not enough. Many people did not consider things like skateboarding, biking, four wheeling, snowboarding, and barrel racing sports, but like all sports, it took motivation, commitment, and perseverance to be successful. Erik Pachetti said "Skateboarding is a sport because there are teams, you compete and you use gear, just like every other sport."

These dare devils had no fear. They always did the unexpected and they worked hard at becoming good at what they do. Brad Lindsey said "I skate to pass the time." The speed, the adrenaline rush, the feeling of accomplishment is why these people lived on the edge.

Many, however, said that it was uncommon for girls to be involved in extreme sports. Yet, there were many girls who are out there, doing the same stunts and dangerous sports as any guy did. Amber Jones said "I think it's cool because girls can show that they are just as good, if not even better, than the guys".

Because these sports were not a part of the school athletic department, these adventure seekers could not wait for the weekend or after school to spend their free time doing what they loved.

Kings and Queens of Broadway

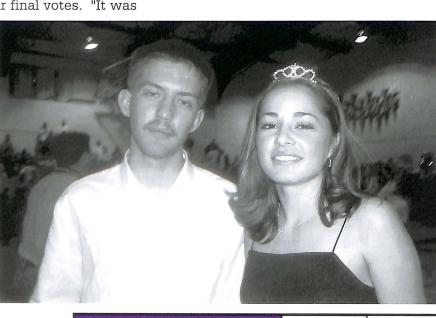

Basketball homecoming nominees walked onto the floor as if they were making a grand entrance at the Tony Awards. They were all dressed their best as they made their way down the red carpet.

Each of the four classes nominated a list of their top ten candidates to make it to the preliminary ballot. The votes were counted and the final nominees were announced early Friday morning. Preparations for the awaited event began to fall in place, as the big night was quickly approaching.

The gym was transformed from a place of fierce competition into a magical ceremony of recognition to remember. After the nominees were announced to the student body for the first time and the assembly was over, students rushed back to their first period class to cast their final votes. "It was really scary at first just because I'm not used to having that many people pay attention to me. But having Mr. Miller there helped a lot!" replied sophomore Nai Saechao, when she was asked about her experience at the morning assembly.

After the homecoming performances were completed, the nominees made their way to the gym floor once again. The halftime of the varsity basketball game was filled with nerves and anticipation for each nominee. "When we all had to go out on the court for them to announce the winners, it felt like it took forever! The butterflies in my stomach took a really long time to go away," said junior Megan Bacigulupi when asked about homecoming night. Although only a few were crowned, everyone was treated like a winner.

Lauren Crawford and Nick Ramirez pose for their picture, as the iunior class prince and princess. Crawford said nervous but it was a great experience. Both looked stunning as they made their way down the red carpet. You could certainly tell they were favorites.

> "Have side shows and play Juvenile and the Luniz and have the squad (Seany-Poo, Ant, Armond, and me) be involved."

Thomas Mason '04

"I think everybody should go and we should have people doing beats and people rapping."

- Tyler Dwyer '06

What could we do to have "crunk" rallies?

"Play more of our music and let us have fun and more fun days."

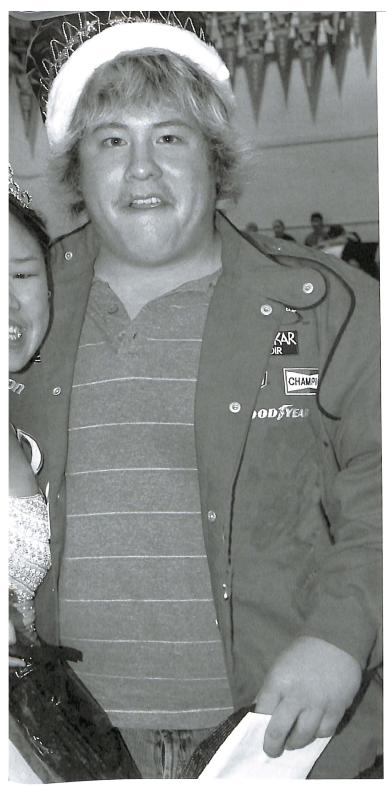

- Philicia Taylor '07

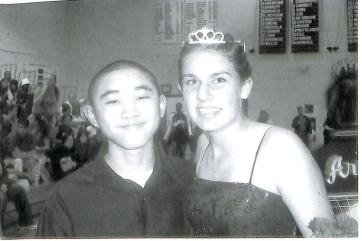

"Play Lil Jon and the Eastside Boys at every rally so everybody could go stupid in the crowd, ya feel me?"

Jacky Williams '05

Keoki Antoque and Kristin Young were crowned Senior King and Queen as they smiled for the camera. They both were really excited to be part of the Basketball Homecoming Royal Court.

winners were Jen Hopkins and Zach Young. "I was excited to win because 1 honestly didn't think I would win. It was really an honor," said Hopkins. Both looked great as they posed with their new titles awaiting their picture to be taken.

lunior class captivates the crowd with their version of the Wizard of Oz. "It's fun to do stuff with my class," said Corneilus. While performing as Dorothy, she lead her class to second place in the float competitions.

Make Way for Broad

Stepping foot into the gym, vou realized that what once was familiar Indian territory has now become mysterious and vivacious New York City. You found your seat and prepared vourself for the loud music and energetic performances of basketball homecoming's, "Broadway Bound". The seniors entertained you with "All that Jazz" from Chicago, the juniors joined Dorothy in the Wizard of Oz, the sophomores hung out with their friends in West Side Story, and the freshmen made you laugh with Danny Zucko and Sandi Olsen in Grease. Each class performed with true Broadway talent.

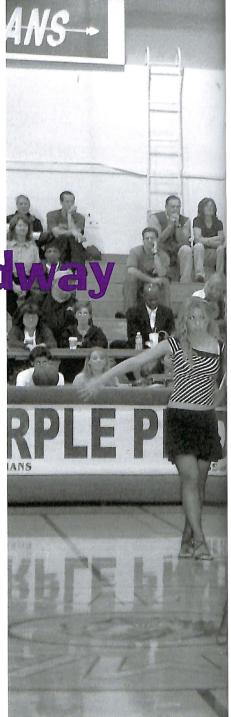

The seniors dazzled us with their Roaring Twenties outfits and swing dancing. We were captivated by the back-stabbing and the romances that blossomed in this theatrical wonder.

The juniors swept us away with heartache we felt for Dorothy not being able to find her way home. In the end, we were all tapping our heels to help her get back to Kansas.

The sophomores made us feel like we were sitting on our own New York stoops. The crowd was caught up in the action of cheering for the Jets and the Sharks. Each heart in the crowd yearned to feel the love that Maria and Antonio felt for each other.

The freshmen had everybody thinking about their summer love. Whether Danny and Sandi were "Stranded at the Drive in" or singing "You're the One I Want" at the carnival, they were truly living the high school dream.

At the end of the night, we were convinced that we really had spent the night on Broadway.

The freshmen left the crowd in awe with their fun performance of Grease. Coming in third place in basketball skits and second place in football floats, the freshmen have had a successful year in the homecoming competitions.

Senior, Jenny Carion, woos the crowd with her dancing and performance as Velma Kelly in their rendition of "Cell Block Tango." Senior Stephanie Ditmer commented. "Every year I look forward to performing the skit." The seniors were the winning float, dazzling the crowd with their special edition of Chicago.

Seniors, Corinne

Alysia Porter,

crowd melt with their performance as love struck Maria and
Antonio in West Side Story. "Next year I really want to beat the freshmen,"
Avalos said.

The juniors based their skit on the Wizard of OZ. "It gave me a rush when we performed in front of that huge crowd," stated Christina Ramerez. To make it their own, they added moves and music from Michael Jackson to make it a little more exciting.

The freshmen got the crowd dancing when they performed Summer Nights. "It was really fun and I can't wait till next homecoming," said Rachael Munson. Munson choreographed most of the skit.

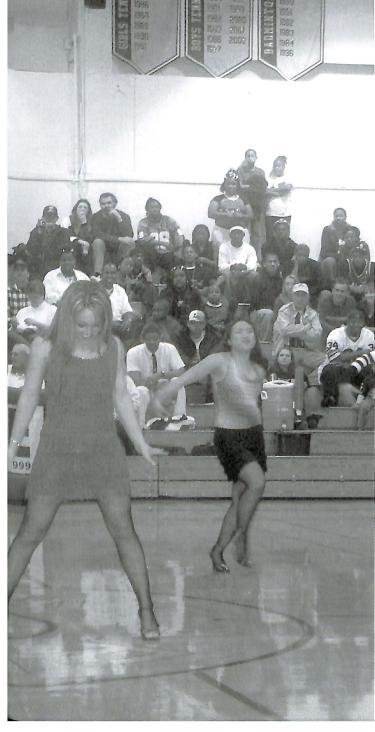

The seniors made the crowd go wild when Trenéa Moore dazzled everybody with her performance as Big Mama. Ben Davini, one of the dancers commented, "I'm white and I can't dance but it was still fun."

The sophomores filled the gym with laughter as they danced across the floor portraying the roles of the gangs in West Side Story. All their moves were synchronized and they looked great.

Crazy in Love

High school sweethearts, soul mates, puppy love everywhere. Whether the realtionship was a year, a month, or a week long, each one has filled with good times, and bad times. From the awkward first date, until they were practically inseparable, all of the couples were spotted on campus.

Many of the couples were friends first, and there were also those who met and had instant sparks. "Melisa was the T.A. in my Spanish class and we started talking on Friendster", said Jonathon Agudo. "The day I asked her out, I gave her a rose and sang her a song that I wrote for her." There were always chances for the couples to hang together at school and outside of school, but some thought it just wasn't enough. Meeting up between classes, at lunch and after school was what most couples did to be together.

Although there weren't very many things to do in town, the couples still enjoyed spending time together. "Jon and I play basketball, watch movies, and wrestle", said Corina Cornelius. "It really doesn't matter where we are or who's around as long as we're together." Through all of the time that they couldn't spend together and all of the schoolwork that took up a lot of time, couples still held on to their strong feeling to each other.

The Athletes played the game with one goal in mind... to win! They relied on the fusion between their mind and body to play the game with determination and precision. Victory was accomplished by their speed and agility. Their strength was supported by their teammates and the leadership of their coaches. SPORTS gave the Athletes an arena to play their game and perform to the best of their abilities.

Most Valuable Player

Enrique Garcia, as a junior was a vital part of the team. Being a diverse player, one would see him just about anywhere on the field at any given game. "He just knows what he is doing out there," commented James Engell. Garcia also carried many years' experience with him and planned to continue with soccer. "I just love playing and it never gets old," Garcia mentioned.

Senior Charlie Miller watches from the sidelines during a game against Napa. "I like it because it is such an intense sport," he said. Miller has been playing soccer for ten years.

Senior, and team captain Shawn Dhillon uses his footwork to control the ball. "Offense is more involved, although defense is what keeps you in the game," commented Dhillon. This was Dhillon's second year playing sweeper.

A difficult goal

Being in M.E.L Division I not only meant that they were among the best in sports, but it also meant that the competition would be that much greater as well. The team started the season with the mentality that they were going to have to work for every victory, and they did just that. Going up against teams such as Davis and Napa the boys had to cope with losses and work to figure out what they could improve on. With long time coaches Mr. Chavez and Mr. Evans, the team had the experienced help they needed; all that was left at that point was the right mentality to lead them to victory.

"Tony's [Chavez] a good coach and he knows what he is doing out there," commented freshman Scott Kubicka. As the season progressed the team continued to work just as hard, regardless of their record. The players wanted to push themselves and work through the challenges. Robbie Spiller's mentality was just that, "Playing keeper is a challenge and I like it because of that." Overall, the boys held their heads high and went into every game trying their best to show what they've been taught, and that they were there to compete.

Despite the strict focus of the team, the boys were still able to fool around and have fun together. "This year is fun, I mean its just a fun team," freshman Brett Chikowski added. The boys made friendships that would last through High School and also got the chance to prove that they would not give up.

Rafael Miranda battles for a ball during a JV game. "Everyone needs to be able to defend, it's an essential part of the game," Miranda commented. This is Miranda's first year playing for the JV team.

Andrew Byrd joined the rest of the guys in leading a rally at lunch. "We have to show that we want to play and get everyone excited about our game." Byrd also helped coach powder puff in years past.

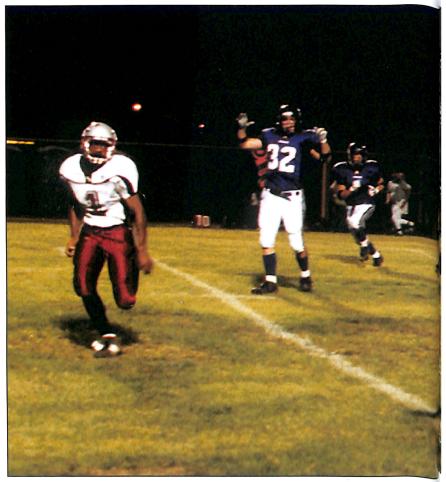

Cory Strickland gained some yards during a game against Vintage. "I just focus on what I need to do to complete the play" Cory had a record breaking year setting new records in rushing yards.

Meet the players

Jeff Shaffer was a major contribution to the team. He was captain and was invloved in keeping the team together. Holding the positions of tight end and outside linebacker kept Shaffer busy. Being a diverse player was only part of his skills. "Being able to make a difference in the game is the best part," Shaffer mentioned. Looking at what Shaffer acomplished throughout the season proves that many of the other players and spectators looked at Shaffer as one of the major players in the game.

Robbie Burkhart begins a play during a game. "Switching up the plays is important to confuse the* defense," said Burkhart. Burkhart played center for the team.

A Record Breaking Year

The varsity football team began the season with a hopeful outlook. Being in division one could have been intimidating; instead the team went into the season knowing they could achieve great victories. Everyday these boys practiced their precision, swiftness, and strength. They had to overcome the heat and push their bodies to the max. "It was important that we come to practice and put in our time for us to be able to win or play well," said Mike Dixion. Meanwhile, coaches closely watched their players and critiqued their faults. This resulted in a skilled, agile, and unified team. When game day rolled around, the team formed a formidable force that was able to crush their competitors.

Because of all of their hard work, the varsity football players were highly respected around campus.

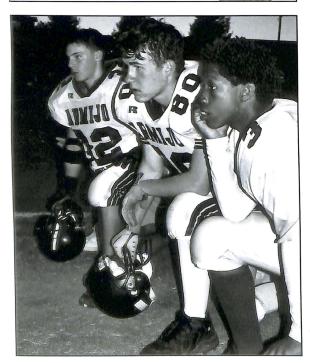

Burkhart R., Butler D., Byrd A., Caldwell X., Cook D., Cunningham P., Diaz C., Espinoza M., Fong L., Gales M., Gallagher S., Garcia E., Hall C., Harris T., Hernandez J., Johnson M., Jones M., Karaholios C., Marsh L., Marinez F., Michael C., Miller J., Moore L., Nierhake T., O'Brien M., Palantino D., Peasley D., Perez D., Saechao R., Saelee K., Saeteurn F., Shaffer J., Simmons D., Siordia S., Souder A., Strickland C., Trigg K., Walker T., Wildman Z.

The team gets together to get ready for a big game against Vacaville. Having the correct mental mind set was a large part of playing football. Many of the players worked together to hype each other up for the game.

Starting quarterback Chris Elder breaks yet another Rodriguez tackle. According to him, "They couldn't tackle me in a phone booth!" The team went on to beat Rodriguez 29-0.

Most Valuable Player

Anthony might as well be the spokesman for the "winners train, losers complain" attitude. After a whole year of sitting the bench last year, Anthony decided he had better get bigger and stronger. "If I wouldn't have lifted weights, changed my diet, ran, and practiced all year long, there's no way I'd be where I am today; starting at leftoutside linebacker." Anthony says he counldn't have done without his idol, his dad, stating, "He pushed me, and kept me going."

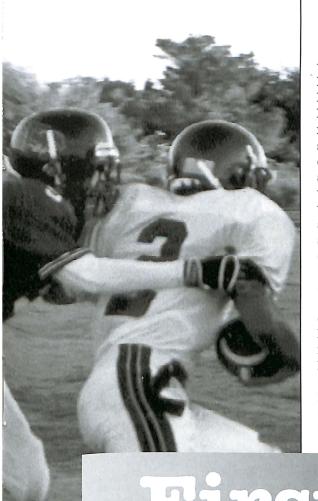

When there was an injury on the field, nothing else mattered. The team took a knee and watched with concern. Many believed that over time your teammates start to feel more like your brothers.

Tony Washington makes an amazing solo tackle in the back field.

The school basketball team declares, "we play hard," but in football the players live by the slogan, "winners train, losers complain." As far as football is concerned there is no such thing as the off-season. especially for J.V. Student athletes lift weights during the winter as well as spring, and then learn and perfect new skills throughout the whole summer. "This game ain't easy," said J.V. head coach Chuck Chauvin, "If it were easy everybody would do it."

Starting offensive and defensive lineman Edwin Herbert added, "It's tough, but it all pays off in the end." Many of the freshmen cannot even believe how much they have learned about football, and even growing up. J.V. is a stepping-stone to Varsity where athletes not only learn the skills necessary to continue to play at a higher level, but how to cope with responsibilities that come along with the game. The coaches stress learning the fundamentals, but also maturing. "We're taking these kids and turning them into young men," said assistant coach John Stevens.

Although growing up and the basic skills may have been on the coaches' mind, winning always came first for everyone. "It's a lot of fun to play, but its way more fun to play and win," said player of the year, freshman Mike Lopez. Football is a team sport and J.V. excelled at just that, playing as one group. With a team like theirs they'll go all the way every year and for years to come.

Strength was a key factor for the boys water polo team, because the ball was often hurled halfway across the pool.

Meet The Player

Kenny Waldthaler has been a member of the Varsity waterpolo team for all four years. This year he was given the title of team captain. His natural skill allowed him to be a major contribution to the team. "II continue playing because it challenges me," said Waldthaler. As team the captain he was expected to keep the team focused and to work hard at competing, despite difficult competition. "Its just something that I really like to do," Waldthaler added.

During practices shooting was a very important skill to perfect so that game time performances were at their best.

Polo: H20 Style

From the stands all that was seen was the strength and aggression of each player as they battled for the ball; but what was not apparent, unless one had spent time in the water, was how brutal the game really was. Boys are usually more aggressive and physical than girls, stereotypically that is, but this game proved what these men were capable of. The polo players took unimaginable hits and kicks from the opposing team, and had plenty of bruises to show for it. Not only was physical aggression a key part of the game, but patience and skill also had great importance. Both captains of the team had at least four years of experience and knew what was needed to excel in the game. Despite a small turn out early in the season, the team managed to work together and prove that each player was capable of becoming a member of the highly respected water polo team.

Defense was a big part of the game, players felt the heat from opposing teams as they battled their way toward the goal.

Waiting to be put into the game is hard, epsecially when your team is losing and you want to get out there and show your stuff. Junior Sarah Drake waits eagerly to be put into the game to prove herself to her coach and her teammates.

Wonder Woman Jacy Burroughs

To any passer by Jacy Burroughs seems to be just another mild-sophomore. But not only does Burroughs participate in the pre IB program, a member of Key club, is on the Speech and Debate team, Jr. Statesmen of America, Jacy is the sophomore class Vice President. Jacy accomplishes all of this and still manages to maintain a 4.0 GPA. Giving it a go Burroughs fell in love with water polo and said, "I joined the water polo team because it seemed like an adventure, something new that I had never tried before." Looking forward to the next two years, Burroughs is going to continue on the road to excellence.

As Stephanie Dittmer got ready to sprint to the ball, she's ready to get her team posation. And to slaughter the opposing team.

Coach Megan Anderson pumps up the team during a timeout. Encouraging them to put pressure onto the Fairfield team. "We need to stay focused. Get your heads back into the game," she commented.

Treading 2 Victory

Imagine being in a pool with dozens of girls biting, scratching, kicking and leaping without even touching the ground just to score a point by throwing a ball into a goal. For the girls' water polo team this happed five days a week. Treading the water Monday through Friday, the girls practiced their skills. Because it is a water sport, the cheering crowd didn't get to see all of the malicious behavior that went on under the water. Many times the girls came out of the pool with bruises. scrapes, and ripped suits from the aggressive opposing players. Due to the violent nature of the game the girls were forced to wear two suits. Before the games both teams line up at the side of the pool and stick out their hands and feet so the referees can check fingernails and toenails of each player to make sure no one will get seriously injured.

This year there were enough players to have a JV and Varsity team, unlike last year when there was only enough players for a varsity team. With the addition of a new coach, Megan Anderson, and inexperienced players, the veterans were determined to have a better season then last vear. With so many new players many of the practices were devoted to teaching the basics of the game. Returning junior, Jamie Loos made a hopeful comment about future teams, "Next years team will be really good because this year we basically taught the game. We will have many experienced players next year." Even though this year's team is young, they caught on to the basic very quickly.

"I enjoy the team bond, watching the new players improve, improving myself, and checking out the guys on the other team." Commeted Kaitlyn Hardin.

Set It Up

Division I was a scary thought for most of the girls on this team. Despite all that they would face, the team went into the season with high hopes and prepared themselves for what was an extremely difficult season. "The hardest part was keeping focused in tough games," said Jennifer Kroman. Along with all the fun the girls had throughout the year, each player was faced with a challenge to step up and compete with all the other teams. It wasn't an easy task but the players were up for anything. The game not only took physical skill and focus, but mental focus as well. One mental mistake could get your head out of the game for the rest of the match. "I made a lot of friends and enjoyed the time spent on the team," said Jayme Clemente. The girls did compete every chance they got and were even able to finish the season.

Lindsay Wray pushed a set to the outside hitter. "Setting used to be really hard for me, but I worked at it and now I proved to myself that I can overcome my obstacles." Wray was starting setter for the team and plans to play until she is an old lady.

Leticia Siroteck was a major role in the defensive end of the team. Sirotec was depended on to get the play switched to offensive in order to side out or earn a point. Playing for the team for the last two years, Sirotec was a major asset to the team. "I like challenging myself and being able to make the saves that I make." Siroteck has been playing volleyball for six years and remains active in the sport outside of school.

Stephanie Munson serves the ball to the opposing team. "Its important to remain focused throughout the match. The slightest mental weakness could cost the game." Munson played an array of positions including outside hitter and middle back.

Cristina Ramirez maintains her stamina in the dry heat. Before every race, she clears her mind. "I keep thinking of the finish line and that motivates me," said Ramirez.

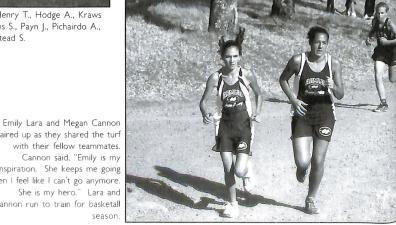

A Race to the Finish

Cross-country was not just about running, it was about endurance and the goal of crossing the finish line. Some even had the pleasure to kick a little dirt in the opposing team's faces. However, before these young athletes were able to achieve these tasks, they had to go through some of the skills necessary to make a great team. And it definetly proved effective when they outran Vacaville at the home course at Rockville Park. It was Nicole Martinez's first year running with the team. Although injured, she managed to finish the race and gave her best throughout the whole three miles. "The team is real nice. We all click and get along," said Martinez. Coach Gallegos continued to root for the team as time went on. The runners tried their best and they all deserved to make it to the finish line.

It was Sofia Tovar's first year running cross country. Tovar was glad she joined because thoroughly enjoyed the team members, the coach, and the race challenges. "Cross country means a lot of work to get you in shape and it teaches you not to give up. Running 2-6 miles a day is tough but it's a good challenge and you get to explore Fairfield better," said Sofia. She worked hard to do her best in every race. "The practices get us ready mentally and physically. If I get nervous I have God with me which calms me down before the race. I try to stick to a person while I'm running and when its the end, I try to get ahead of them with a sprint. It's a great way to challenge yourself and you get bigger goals every week." That is what we liked to hear from a beginner in cross country.

Chris Roa and Shon Winstead both sprint for the finish after the long and tough race. After the race Roa stated, "The most difficult obstacle in a race is the final stretch before the finish line. By that time we are all tired and we have to dig deep to find the strength." Chris Roa also played tennis in recent years.

As the race begins, Mark Sladona sprints with the Napa runners. The begining of the race was crucial for Sladona because it was when he set the pace for how he would run during the meet. "When I stand at the starting line I focus on the course and my stamina," said Sladona.

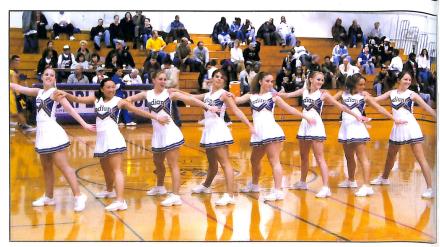

The spirited cheerleaders perform with dances and stunts during a basketball game. The girls loved entertaining the crowd during the football and basketball seasons. The squad bonded well and was made up of all juniors and one senior.

Both squads established friendships during cheer camp in July. "Camp at UC Santa Cruz was fun this year...definitely a lot of memories," junior, Amy Hurd said. This was Hurd's second year of cheering and first year on Pom Squad.

The Pom Squad performs one last time at Senior Night. "Tonight was a bittersweet ending. My past four years of cheerleading have been unforgettable," senior, Lacy Towner said. Towner led the crowd with her enthusiasm and spirit throughout both football and basketball seasons.

Varsity Cheer and Pom

The cheerleaders started perfecting their cheers and halftimes at the beginning of the summer. Their practices took place three times a week over summer from 6am to 8am in front of the big gym. They had to be extremely dedicated to want to give up their mornings of sleeping in and watching cartoons to learn new cheers and dances. Towards the end of summer, they attended camp, where they swept everyone away taking home the most awards, and an invitation to perform at the Pro Bowl in Hawaii. Over the summer both squads were seen getting together for sleepovers and kick its. The Pom Squad got together to paint the boxes that they were seen standing on at the football games. On the first day of school everyone knew who the cheerleaders were, because traditionally, the cheerleaders wear their uniforms to start the new school year off. Cheering the team to victory, Armijo's football team did an outstanding job, as well as the basketball team, who made it to playoffs! This year, the Pom Squad was added back into the equation, which hadn't been around since the 2000-2001 school year. Most of the girls on the squad were returning cheerleaders, but there were two new editions to the squad who hadn't cheered before. The halftime shows were exciting this year, where the crowd really got a treat with two performances from both Cheer and Pom Squads.

The Perfect Cheer

Cheerleading was not just what you saw out on the basketball courts. "It's a lot of responsibility," commented Natalie Macias. It took a lot of hard work and practice to do what all these young women did. They had the confidence and courage to go out in front of all those people. Alexis Kofoed added "It's nerve racking yet so much fun." Cheerleading was not just pretty smiles and short skirts, it was ladies looking forward to coming to practice everyday and showing up early to every game just so they could give courage to the players and pump up the crowd. "We have to pump up the crowd when they are not in the game," said Marie Freschal. Cheerleading was a sport that took a lot of practice and preparation, but most of all, it needed dedication. "In one word I would say the whole squad is dedicated," Lindsay Williams said. And that was exactly what they all thought.

Clara Dellenbach rallied the crowd during a JV basketball game. "The games are fun. I like being with my friends and getting the crowd loud," said Dellenbach. This is Dellenbach's first year on the cheer squad, she also is a competitive dancer.

While the football team hudles up for a time out the cheerleaders see this as a chance to pump up the crowd. "Timeouts are an amazing oportunity to cheerlead," said Autumn Rose.

Game, Set, Match

Tennis was a strenuous game that pushed the girls to their physical limit. For many this was another year of playing a game they loved and for others it was their first year. Yet, no matter how long they had been playing, this year brought new challenges to overcome, and new goals to shoot for. The tennis team took on a lot of new players, but their determination to succeed allowed the newcomers to catch on quickly. Rya Agatep said that she had started playing tennis at Solano Community College over the summer and found it to be a very fun game.

The girls had such a great time playing tennis that most of them decided to definitely continue playing after high school. Stephanie Dulay, a junior, said, "I will never stop playing tennis, at least as a hobby, if not competitively." Each girl strived to be the best and have a good time doing it.

Before games, Vanessa Reyes told her self "Live as if you'll die tomorrow, dream as if you'll live forever!" It pumped her up and got her ready to put her all into it.

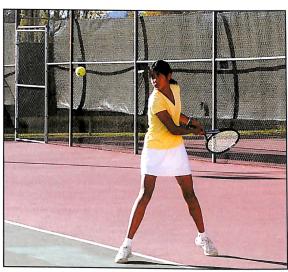

Katelyn Trottier keeps her eyes on the ball despite the hot sun that glares down on her. "If you're doing your best, you won't have time to worry about failure," Katelyn Trottier commented.

Sophomore Michelle Lim found singles to be challenging and exciting. Lim commented, "This year I felt like I progressed more than last year."

Linda Li said, "I was proud of the team, we all gave it our very best and I'm looking forward to another great year next year.

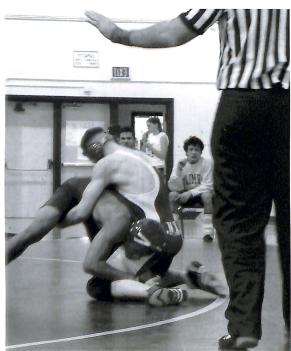

Seconds count down as Tracy Walker gets serious in the intense match. "It's like your puttin' on a show. It's just you, him, and the crowd," said Tracy.

It was Johnny Saeteurn's first year of wrestling and he really enjoyed it. For many, wrestling was fun and challenging, but for Johnny, it's both. "The best thing about wrestling is you get to fight somebody in a match," Johnny said. He usually tried to stay off his back and make no mistakes. Learning the coach's moves were also a big part of working as a team. "Coach Mark is cool about everything. Coach Dan helps us a lot, wrestles, and shows us moves. Coach Monday is cool too, he's funny," said Johnny, as this being his last and final year of high school.

Bobby Vitatoe moves in for the tackle to take down the contender. "It could be intimidating, but when you step on the mat it all disappears," said Bobby, Wrestling keeps him motivated to keep his grades up and to be physically "fit.

The opponent struggles to get free of the tight pin our wrestler put him in. It seems as all the practices paid off and the bone-crushing positions were taught well.

Rage in the Ring!

One, Two, Three (the bell rings) Start! The crowd went wild as the two wrestlers on the mat went at each other for the win. That's right boys and girls, another fun filled year of arm wrenching and backbreaking wrestling has come and gone again! DeMario McGregor, a junior, also wrestled hard in the ring. "It can be intimidating but when the ref tells you to shake hands, everything goes away," said DeMario. Those young men and women went through intense practices that pushed their bodies to the limit just by trying to learn all the moves and skills needed to win on the mat.

Marques Gales, also a junior said, "If you push yourself hard and practice, the better you will be." However, that's not all they needed to learn, they also had to learn how to know their opponent just by using their eves and watching them wrestle beforehand. "You can't judge the opponent before the match. It depends on how good they wrestle", said sophomore Jimmy Lowe. By the end of the year the wrestling team surpassed all expectations when they sent Bobby Viatoe, Mark Saldana, and Anthony Colett to sub-sections.

Nothing But Net

Before each game began the gym was filled with anxious anticipation. For the girls of the varsity basketball team it was an opportunity to show their talent and skill by playing the game they loved. "Before the games we say cheers, dance, and just get crazy. It gets everybody pumped," said junior, Corina Cornelius.

The girls practiced very hard this year to achieve both individual and team goals. "At the beginning of the season we didn't play like a team, but as the season progressed teamwork became one of our strong points," said junior, Salonika Owens. The majority of the team agreed that if you really put your heart into the game the results would exceed the expectations of yourself and your peers.

Senior, Megan Cannon was a leader both on and off of the court. Megan's favorite part of being on the basketball team was "the companionship from team mates, and the excitement of being on the court." Outside of school Cannon spent her time working two jobs and maintaining a high grade point average. Besides playing basketball Cannon was also a part of the Cross Country team. Cannon said her favorite part of the game was that it was "a more physical contact sport." This year her goal was "to be a better leader on the court," which she accomplished with ease.

The players watch eagerly to see if the attempted shot went through the hoop. Coach Peralas stated, "Shooting was something we emphasized during practice. On game days it showed." Shooting was one of the strengths of this year's team.

Burnett Parker watches in anticipation for the ball to fall in the hoop as it bounces off the backboard. Parker said, "Waiting for the ball to go in, it seems like it's going in slow-mo!"

Take it to the Hoop

Through every game, win or loss, all the members of the girls JV basketball team stuck together. It was a season of learning, growing and perfecting their skills. With practice everyday and two or three games a week it was a lot of work but they were willing to do it. "The coach inspired all of us to work together and to give it our all," Hayley Kendal said. Each game was an exciting way for the players and the spectators to enjoy the game of basketball. "Even though not too many fans came to our games it made us want to win even more," Jessica Cadenasso said. When the crowds or parents showed up, the girls showed them they could work the ball.

Even though this was Dayla Deal's first year of playing high school basketball she proved she could put the pressure on her opponents. "When I was on the court, I gave it my all," she commented. The players all had the determination to make it on to the Varsity team.

Shooting for the Stars

Misty Lee is a very active sophomore. Besides playing basketball she was also involved in volleyball, and badminton. She never liked to play basketball before until her grandma encouraged her because of her height. After her first season, she fell in love with the game. After high school Misty wants to go to college somewhere outside of California. One reason why she loves playing basketball is because she gets to play with her friends and to keep in shape.

During time outs the team regroups and focuses on their technique and mindset. Rickiesha McGregor said, "In the huddle that's were we get back on the same page."

Darlice Gill stands outside the court and waits for the ref to allow her to pass the ball inbound. "When I play I always look for an ungaurded player to pass the ball to," said Gill. The rest of the team waits for the game to begin again.

Dominating the MEL

They showed no intimidation and stepped onto the court with the determination to win. The men of the Varsity Basketball team were determined to make something of them selves. As the season progressed the team grew both physically and mentally. It was difficult to perform at the level these boys did, but they worked together to obtain their goals. "Our team has good court chemistry. We've played together so long that we know exactly where they're going to be." stated Kevin Lanflisi. Each player had to be part of the team, but also push themselves. Although each player had their own goals that pushed them to achieve, "our team has no selfish players," continued Lanflisi. The boys enjoyed being led by Coach Dahl and any advice he could lend.

Not only did the boys depend on their teammates to lead them to victory, but also the crowd's enthusiasm. "I like being able to dunk it. It gets the crowd hyped up and without the crowd being loud. it's a boring game. The crowd gets us pumped up," Malcolm Ackridge commented. With Intense practices and a demanding pre-season and division season schedule, the team had to put all their energy towards the games. With competitors such as Davis and Vacaville, the boys didn't blink an eye and dominated the MEL division.

Ackridge M., Cary T., Harris T., Lanflisi K., McCall J., Moore L., Saelee K., Simmons D., Smith A., Trigg A.,

Derek Simmons rebounded a shot to begin the counter attack. "I like being out on the court and making a difference," Simmons said.

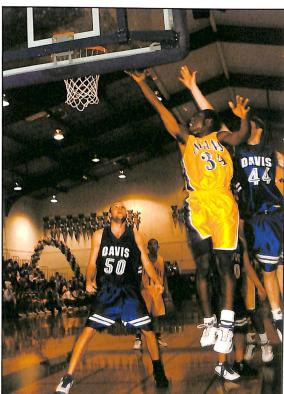

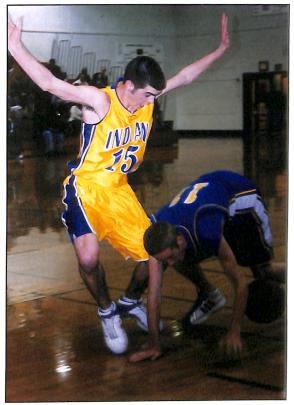

Terrance Cary got around the defender to get two more points for his team. "We work well as a team," commented Cary when asked how well their team might do this season.

Anthony Smith showed off his talent by sinking this shot against Davis. "The pressure doesn't get to me, it just makes me want to win that much more," said Smith.

Kevin Lanflisi intimidated the other player while playing defense to win the ball. Without a strong defense, the boys would have had a more difficult season. Lanflisi has played basketball for all four years.

Hoop It Up

In J.V. basketball it was not just skill that made a player a baller. Their motto announced, "We play hard," because the sport also required heart, determination, stamina, and even thought. The pace and momentum changed constantly in this athletic competition; so, along with other little things hustle could have been the deciding factor in close games. "When we first started conditioning, I said 'the word of the year, gentlemen, is focus," stated Coach Trigg. "Sure enough, focus got us through the year." "The biggest thing I learned this year from coach Trigg was how to think while playing basketball," recalled forward/center David "Dirty D" Knott, who earned his nick name due to his overpowering body odor. Many teammates agreed with him, about how to think, and added that this year was a lot of fun. "When you win as much as we do, you can't help but have fun," said guard Dominique Patterson. However. to win that much you had to work even more. Practice really did make perfect. It took place everyday there wasn't a game, including a couple of weekend practices. Thanks to practice, Coach Trigg won 35 games in a row over the course of three years. Out of the past three teams he has coached, his first loss was suffered half way through this years season. According to the team, there was nothing better than winning, and winning was what they did best.

Cern Saeteurn (guard, #12) loves basketball simply because its fun. He picked up a basketball in first grade and since then hasn't been able to put it down. "I've been playing organized ball since the third grade. I've played for every school I've gone to," he said. He's done well, and credits his success to conditioning which he says is necessary, especially for his quick defensive game that requires a lot of stamina. "I'd love to go pro, but the chances are so slim," he stated, "If nothing else I'd love to go play at Arizona State, like my idol Mike Bibby. Although it is fun, its also hard, both on and off the court. "During basketball there's not much time for anything but school, which you work extra hard on. Without my girl Maureen I couldn't have done it. She always kept me going, and pushed and encouraged me." On the court Cern said the hardest thing to do is find his rythm. He has tons of memories from the game, but he says his overall favorite basketball memory would have to be the undefeated team, his freshman year.

When the ball was kicked, Stephanie Lanza runs towards the goal to try to score. She said, "It's exciting because everyone's out to play and beat us, it's really competitive and fun." Girls soccer was driven each year to be M.E.L. champs.

Kickin It With Hyano

Junior, Ayano Healy, one of the most talented soccer players has played on varsity since her freshmen year. "I love working hard with my teammates towards a goal." Ayano was also involved in pageantry, two competitive soccer leagues outside of school, and on top of it all she was in the IB program. Ayano plans to play her sport after high school on a college team and maybe someday play professionally.

Just Kick It!

The girl's soccer team underwent the grueling hours of conditioning that began in January. For many of them, the extra time spent on perfecting their sport did not go to waste. "Conditioning was long and hard, but it will definitely help us in our season," said sophomore Lisa Nielson.

The girls showed off their soccer skills and proved to many that girls like to play rough. When asked what she liked best about the sport, junior Cristina Ramirez said, "I like competing against the best teams because it's really fun and challenging and winning against them is great." Most girls had experience in playing the sport and had played with some of the other teammates before.

Junior Sierra Castro said she started playing soccer, "because I wanted to try a new sport. I plan to continue to play after high school." The girls were all very committed to their sport. The practices always were demanding but they stuck with it and as a result had a very hardworking and dedicated team. Work hard, Play hard.

Sean Lynn has been running track for 2 years and says he likes it because of the one-onone competition. "It's cool, because it's all on my shoulders," he said. In his freshman year he made varsity and helped his team qualify for sub-sections. Unlike many who do it just to stay in shape for another sport, Sean looks forward to running track. "It'll never happen, but I'd like to go pro, or even better, go to the olympics," he said. When asked about college he mentioned Cal Berkeley, and later said his idol would have to be Gold medal winner Michael Johnson due to their similar running styles. Like last year, Sean ran the 400 meter dash, the 4  $\rm X$ 400 relay, and the 4 X 100 relay.

Sophomore Mike O'Brien perfects his shot-put technique. "I was undefeated in J.V. copetition last year as a freshman," she said. Mike has also played varsity football since he was a freshman.

Junior, Jazz Burney, and senior, Keith Trigg lead the team through stretches. "You got to stretch, otherwise you'll injure yourself," said Keith. Both Jazz and Keith participated in sprints and hurdles.

Shawn Stokes sets up on the blocks as Coach Philiyaw instructs. He later said, "At first it may feel awkward, but you learn to love the blocks."

On Your Marks...

Encouragement, repitition, and experience won the overall race this year in track. Although most consider both running and throwing individual sports, many admitted they couldn't have done what they did if it weren't for their team backing them. Repetition, or practice took place every day, rain or shine, from 3 to at least 5pm and some days even 6pm. New coaches such as Ms. Philyaw, and Mr. Holland brought unteachable experience to both runners and throwers. The return of Coach Mundy, was also a big help. "The coaches were great," said thrower/runner, Reggie Robinson, "I've learned a lot from all of them, especially coach Holland." Many of the athletes agreed about the coaches. Most of them also agreed that the team was one of the most fun-loving and closest they'd ever been on. "I've been on a bunch of sports teams," said "big" Mike Jones, "But none were as fun as this one." As fun as it may have been the year was full of struggle as well. Said head coach Philyaw, "I told them it wasn't going to be easy, but they got through it, very well too. I'm proud of every one of them."

Track runners go through their pre-practice warmup.

Heat, sun, sweat and muscle: the factors the Boy's Tennis Team carried on to the court everyday. Playing tennis for the team was all about having fun: "I joined tennis because it is a fun sport and I wanted to get better," said freshman, James Jenkins.

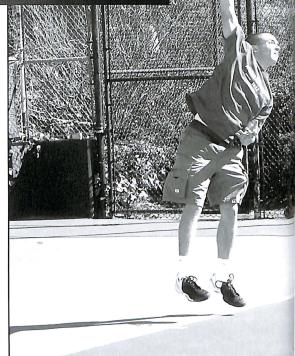

Another reason was the boys just loved playing a good game with their friends. "Scott Siordia and I decided to play doubles together, but he flaked!" said senior, Jeff Shaffer. Boy's Tennis started conditioning by running up the hill, stretching and practicing their strokes. Practices were everyday spring season, unless they were rained out. To the boys, practices were essential to relax: "Practices are fun because we get to work on stuff to get better without the stress," said sophomore, Lewis Chan. Boy's Tennis was an example of practice makes perfect.

Senior, Luther Hermano remembers, "It is always crucial to try to get each ball, whether it's at the net or the baseline." This was important to remember because playing doubles is very fast paced.

Meet the Players

Ted Galbraith started playing tennis at age eight, and was very successful at it. He was encouraged to join the team by Coach Davis. "I love playing when it is a really tight match, and everyone is watching. It's such a rush after each point and there is no better feeling then pulling away with a victory". Other than playing tennis, Ted also plays basketball and enjoys hanging out with his friends. Along with school he maintains holding two jobs, one at Hollister and the other at Round Table Pizza.

Junior, Eric Roman gazes at his return a serve. "When I return a serve, I use strategy and hit the ball cross court. It makes it difficult for my opponent to get and it also tires him out by running," said Roman.

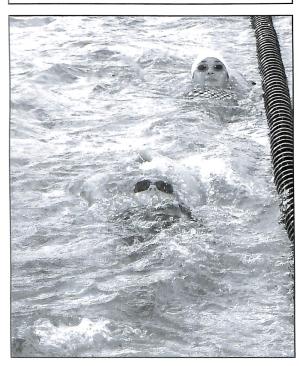

Playing doubles just doesn't double the people but it also doubles the pace of the game. Junior, Jason Pecoraro, said, "Doubles is fun because it gives you a chance to work together with your teammates to win decisive intense matches." Senior, Jenny Carion, dives into the pool during warm ups before a meet. "It's a really good team this year, everyone's close and friendly. It's a small team and I like that. I get to swim with one of my best friends, Stephanie Dittmer," said

Meet The Players

Junior, Carolyn Haunschild, is like a fish out of water when she's not spending time in the pool. Besides being on the swim team she also plays water polo. Haunschild is an active member in the honor society, Women In Technology, Junior Statesmen of America, and is in the I.B. program. When she's not busy with school she likes to spend her time volunteering for the city. "During the season I really have to buckle down, concentrate, and be organized, or it gets crazy!" Advice she would give to people thinking about joining a swim team is, "it's good exercise and a fun atmosphere".

Camilla Hawthorne and Kaitlyn * Hardin are swimming their best to be prepared for an upcoming meet. Hawthorne said, "Swimming has made my friendships with fellow teammates much stronger! The memories and jokes from swimming create a great feeling of cameraderie."

Junior, Jamie Loos, perfects her backstroke during a practice. She said, "Before a race, when I know my opponent is barely a second faster than me, I get kinda nervous knowing I could beat them if I try my hardest." Loos has been a dedicated member of the swim team since her freshmen year.

Adrenaline, sounds of the crowd, diving head first, and the quiet of water. Not only was swimming and diving a physical challenge but also a mental challenge for the team members to balance their sport with their school work.

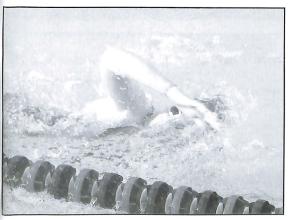

Practices began in early February, many of the players had a mixed sense of excitement and fear about beginning practices. "Practice is fun because you don't have to worry about what's next like during a meet," said Matt Chambers. Everyone on the team tried as hard as they could to perfect themselves in every aspect of swimming, so they could dominate against other teams and eventually move up in the M.E.L. rankings.

The team members became a close group of friends who motivated each other to become better swimmers and divers. "I made lots of good friends through swimming, we all like to do fun things like go get bacon after practice," Kiersten Hansen commented.

Sophomore, Nicole Dean, swims laps during warm ups at a practice. Dean said, "My favorite competition is the breast stroke because it's the easiest to do." Dean was involved in many other activities besides being on the swim team, including being the sophomore class president.

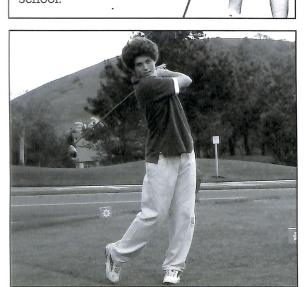

Kevin Lanflisi is warming up at the driving range. Lanflisi thought that "The best thing about our team is that we are like a big family."

Meet the Players

Ben Davini played a key role in the success of this years' golf team. Ben has been golfing on a team for five years and says the best way to play is "carefree because golf is a laid back sport." Ben started golfing at six years old when his dad showed him how to play, and has enjoyed it ever since. Ben said that golf gives him "a chance to get out of all of the things on his mind from home and school."

Stepping up to the tee and taking a big swing, Andrew Toolson was in complete concentration of the game. "Golf is challenging because it takes a long time to get good at it," said Andrew. Andrew has played golf for five years.

Kirk Noonan spends some time perfecting his swing. Noonan said that golf was "fun because it is hard work."

Playing to Par

Stepping up to the tee, the crowd went silent, the only thing they were thinking was keep your eye on the ball. The hole in the distance, images around them went blurry, focusing themselves on what they had to do, they took a few deep breaths, and swung.

Although the team was small compared most other sports, the golf team still had a great season. Golf is more of an individual sport. It involved complete concentration, patience, and self determination to excel in the game. One advantage to being on the golf team was not only being a part of something great, but that everyone had an equal opportunity to shine. Jeremy Lim said," Golf is a really fun and challenging sport, that everyone gets to participate in."

The team members all devoted time, energy, and hard work to help improve their season. With practice everyday and matches more than once a week, they all sacrificed a lot of their free time to be a team player.

Meet the Players

Senior, Christina Gaeden, also known as "Bo Jangles," earned her position as a starting catcher after working hard during practices and games. "I learned a lot over the past two years, and my hard work had finally paid off," she said. Gaeden hustled on and off the field, and always made sure to keep her spirits up for the team. Playing varsity for her second year, Gaeden was known for her unceasing ability to make the team, as well as the coaches, laugh all day long. One of the most common thing you might hear her say in the dugout was, "'Cause you're too legit, you're too legit to quit!" Bo's teammates will always remember her for her work-ethic and animated personality.

Erica McIntyre creeps in as the pitcher releases the ball. "Third base is an exciting position to play because you're so close to the batter," McIntyre said. As a sophomore, this was her second year on varsity.

Diamonds Are A

Girl's Best Friend

With a brand new line-up, this year's varsity softball focused on their defense, offense, and teamwork. There were only seven returnees, as the team was made up of four seniors, ten juniors, two sophomores, and one freshman. The girls got off to an uneasy start, but the team quickly gelled together and surprised everyone. Senior, Nicole Perata, was named captain of the squad and led them with much pride and determination. "We were all so different," she said. "But that is what made it so great. It's awesome to see how well everyone comes together when we hit the field."

The team worked hard day in and day out. After a long day at school, the girls hit the field for a few hours of running, drills, and practice. Junior Maryn Oyoung explained, "Practice was a little different this year. We came out earlier and got started right away. We knew we had to really focus to get the job done." They put their all into those few hours because they knew that the hard work at practice would really show during the week's games.

The varsity softball team was driven, talented, and had a whole lot of heart. They perservered and proved to everyone what they were made of. It was an exciting season that held awesome plays, big hits, and a field full of memories. These girls set their sights on a goal, and were willing to do whatever it took to accomplish it.

Met the Players

Veronica Oquendo had played softball for four years beofre she began playing for her high school team. The reason she started playing was because of the influence her older sister, Monica, had on her. "She is good at softball, and she makes me want to work harder at playing," Oquendo said. "She is a natural softball player and I want to as good as she is." Veronica also plays because she has passion for the sport. When Veronica wasn't at practices and games, her favorite things to do were hanging out with her friends and eating.

Sometimes your family members are your biggest reason for playing a certain sport. "My whole family plays softball or baseball. I have twin brothers who I look up to because they've been playing their lives," Caitlin Engell said.

Some softball players think the game is all about winning, others think it's about how much you enjoy it. "The most important thing to me is having fun because if you're not having fun, you shouldn't be playing in the first place," Amber Jones said.

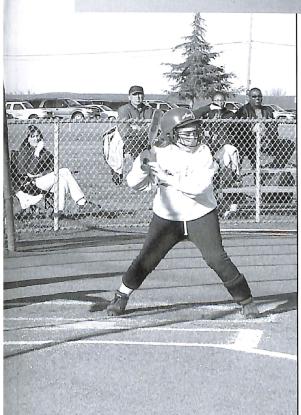

Being focused is the most important aspect of softball. "You can't let your mind wander onto other things, " Nina Stuart said. Stuart took her own advice when she went up to bat.

Swing It Girl

Whether they've played for one or eight years, the JV Softball team came together for the '03 -'04 season to show off their wellpolished skills on the field. The season started out with rainy tryouts and windy practices, but neither weather condition discouraged the girls. Every person had an important role to play on the team; from pitching to playing out in right field, every position was important to the game. When it was their turn to bat or play out on the field, there was no doubt in anybody's head that the team would be contributing 110% and giving it their all. If a player was having a bad day, it was up to her teammates' to give her the support that she needed to play to her fullest. Alyson Matthews, for example, was a very dedicated player and had been for seven years. "Two of the hardest things about softball is keeping your temper and working as a team," Matthews said. "You have to be determined and willing to keep your drama off the field." Softball was also an enjoyable sport to watch as well as to play. No matter how far they traveled, they always had their fans and teammates support. Another important technique of softball is being able to anticipate where the play is going to occur. "You have to be aggressive and want the ball," Rachel Clayton said. "You basically have to guess where the ball is going to go."

A.Belle, R. Clayton, J. Cordova, J. Curtis, D. Deal, C. Daniels, K. Elder, C. Engell, J. Hamby, E. Henderson, A. Jones, S. Kirker, A. Matthews, M. Russell, V. Oquendo, T. Stine, N.Stuart, K. Wiggins, L. Woodall, Coach Greg, Coach Clara

When you pitch, you have to try to block out all other distractions, like Elyse Henderson does. "You have to try to focus on what you are doing and do your best on each pitch."

Mike Engell warms up before a game. "I like shortstop because you have to be quick," Engell said. Engell plans on playing ball in college.

Meet The Players

Senior Mike Engell has been playing baseball for twelve years now. Filling the spot of shortstop for this year's team, Engell shows a lot of potential to fulfill his dreams. "Hopefully I will continue to play college ball at a University," Engell stated. Despite losing some talented seniors last year, Engell believes his team is capable of winning championships. "This is a very special team because we are all close together. We are very talented and we have studs that can lead the team." Engell also added that he believes that this years team is one of the strongest in school history.

Bob Carpenter makes a catch during practice. "We don't have any star players, but I think we'll go far," Carpenter predicted. Carpenter has been playing catcher for ten years now as a junior.

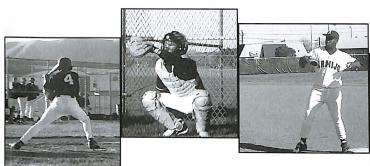

Chris Engell practices ground balls.
"It [baseball] is my passion, I grew up playing it," Engell said when asked why he plays. Engell has been playing baseball since he was five

Play Ball!

This year's team had a difficult challenge ahead of them. Following a near perfect championship team, and starting the season with a new coach would make the season an interesting one. The men of the Varsity team didn't withdraw from the challenge they were faced with and pushed themselves to obtain the ultimate; another MEL championship and possibly success in state. "We're all fighting for the same thing, there are no individual players," Ty'relle Harris commented. The team underwent changes with leadership, including a new group of seniors trying to lead the team, and Mr. Singer acting as the new coach. Keoki Antoque thought Singer was a good addition to the team. "I think Coach Singer has a lot of experience and that he can take us all the way," Antoque added. The men of the team had years of experience playing together, especially since last year the team was a younger team. Only losing five seniors and gaining only three new players, the team had the element of experience on their side.

The team gets together before an inning. "Baseball helps me keep order in all aspects of my life," Evan Massey commented. As a team, the men had to re-focus to get back in the game after a frustrating inning.

Meet the Players

Starting pitcher Kyle Jackson says he loves baseball, because it comes so easy to him. His father played baseball and pitched also. Kyle thanks good genes for his talent, but also says he couldn't have done it without his idol, his dad. "He's been through it all, and knows what to expect and when to expect it," Kyle said. Over the course of 11 years in which he's been playing, he's learned how very important conditioning is, especially for a pitcher. Other than his talent, he says his heart and dedication to the game will hopefully bring him to Oklahoma University, one day. For now he'll practice non-stop and continue to root for (as he put it) "the greatest team of all time" the Oakland A's.

Nick Anzalone winds up for the pitch. "Pitching is fun, but I'm not that good at it," he said. Nick plays all over the field infield or outfield as well.

Members of the infield meet at the pitchers mound with Coach Todd Smith. Josh Moresi, on the far left, said, "Pitchers get most of the credit, but they are only as good as their infield." This is #Josh's second year on J.V. He plays short stop.

Derek Simmons steps up to the plate and watches ball one fly by him. He later said, "I read the pitches pretty well and when I connect, its gone." Derek has been playing baseball longer than any other sport.

Swingin' for the Fences

The starting catcher stays warm between innings by catching a few balls from the pitcher.

"Squish the bug...eye on the ball!" these were just a cuople of the fundamental phrases uttered daily at J.V. baseball practice. As with all J.V. sports the basics were preeched in hardball day in and day out. With the loss of last year's coaching staff and quite a few freshman new-comers the team had to start from scratch. Todd Smith a friendly and familiar face seen all over campus took over as head coach this year, while relatives of the athletes lended their time as asistant coaches. "I love the kids, and I really love the sport," said head coach Todd.

The team made it clear they had the biggest hearts, and most talent in their league. "We did our best and had fun," said Andre Terrell. The team as a whole also agreed that Coach Todd taught them a lot and turned out to be a great coach. "He was a good coach, I liked him." said Brandon Webster. The team took their wins with their losses and always held their heads high. "I didn't like to lose but it happened, a couple times," stated shortstop Kenneth Gillett. Overall, the team did well playing the great American pastime.

Michelle Lim lunges to drop the birdie over the net. "My favorite thing about the sport is smashing the birdie into my oppenents face," said Lim. This was her second year on the team.

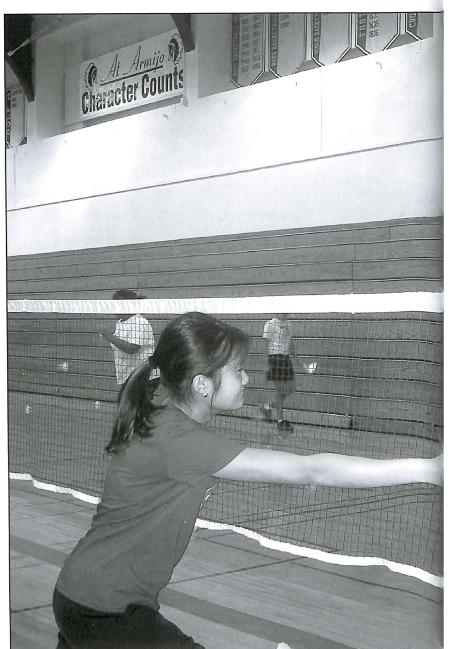

Meet the Players

Senior, Ashley Lafon began playing Badminton sophomore year, though she wished she had started her freshmen year. She had always liked playing in P.E. and thought it would be fun to learn how to actaully play the real game. She played with confidence and did it for fun. "The most important thing about playing is having the right attitude," said Lafon. Her rank within the team flucatuated between positions three and four. Lafon was competitve while she was on the court but was not when she was watching on the side lines. "The challenges I face when playing are with my short games. I get lazy, so I'm not able to move fast enough to get the birdie." Ashely hopes to continue playing badminton after highschool but for fun, not competitvely.

Maureen Aragon gets ready to serve her game winnning point. "The challenges I face when playing is side stepping, but when I master that it'll be easier to get down the court," said Aragon. Aragon was very competitive when she played.

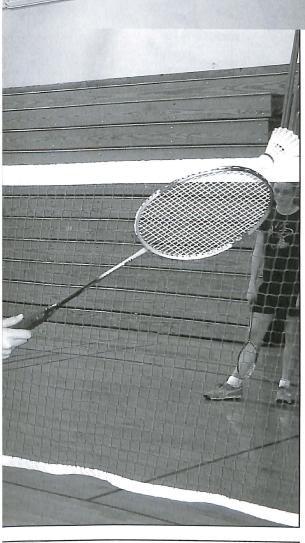

Paula Malit's major focus this year was practicing her serves. "Serving is a very vital part of badminton," said Malit. She planned on continuing the sport after high school.

Smash that Birdie!

When most people thought of Badminton, they thought "that's not a sport." Badminton was a sport that involved a racket, a birdie and of course an opponent. "When I first told my friends that I was joining the team, some of them laughed, but then once they came to my games they realized it was a sport," said Emily Gutierrez. It was played with a partner or by yourself. It required a lot of handeye coordination and physical strength. How did it require physical strength you say? It was actually quite hard to hit the birdie over the net. One had to hit the birdie with all of their might to make it fly vigorously. "The most challenging obstacle I face most when playing, is when the light shines in my eyes, I hate that!," said Raechal Tan. Speed was a very vital thing in this sport. You continually had to think ahead on how to trick your opponent. The point of the game was to make the other opponent run and second guess themselves as to where to be on the court. "When your matched up against somebody who is exceptionally good, it is more intimidating when they smash the birdie in your face," said Maggie Wangeline.

Ahmad E., Alvarado J., Aragon M., Bacigalupi M., Ballard D., Blake A., Busey C., Clay A., Coragon L., Delgado G., Drake S., Flores L., Gutierrez E., Hall K., Ho E., Inabnett K., Isla M., Kim S., Lafon A., Lim M., Malit P., Moazeni S., Monroy T., Muoa S., Nquyen V., Reed L., Rogers C., Sandhu S., Tabing F., Tan R., Tharp L., Tran L., Trewn N., Wangeline M., Williams B., Yee K.

Before she serves the birdie, Lena Tran thinks about how to improve her game. "The challenges I face when playing are in doubles games. It's hard for me and my partner to communicate with each other," said Tran. Tran was fun to watch because she had interesting ways of handling the birdies.

We were the INDIVIDUALS – each of us with a different path to travel and a different goal to reach. No matter what obstacle we faced in life, we knew we could always rely upon ourselves to get through it. When we came to a fork in the road, we had to make a choice. We listened to our hearts, opened up our minds, and confidently took a step into the unknown territory. However, we were not alone in our travels. The INDIVIDUALS we saw daily were there to support, encourage, and lend a helping hand as we made our way towards the finish

Grow

It's hard to believe that eighteen years ago we were just babies. Back then we didn't have to worry about homework, college, a career, or what we planned to do after high school. Now we're beginning to plan our futures and must decide what's best for us. In the past we have depended on our parents and teachers to guide us through the bumps in the road. Now, as high school comes to an end, we must learn to stand on our own and make the tough decisions that will lead us down the path of life. But, no matter how much we focus on the future, it's still fun to look at the past. Weren't we cute??!!

Those adorable little toddlers of yesterday are now the future leaders of tomorrow.

Our Language

While she reads to the class, Melanie McMullan comments, "AP classes are challenging, but it's worth it in the long run."

All-nighters, last minute essays, vocabulary quizzes galore, and not to mention the endless pages of reading...these were the glories of our English classes. The English teachers assigned loads work in order to show students that literature should be appreciated. English teachers made students read novels and short stories to inspire them to be creative with their own writing. Jade Ward said, "I think what makes a good English teacher is when they communicate with each student in a way they can all learn together."

Some classes focused more on writing papers while other classes focused on reading and analyzing books. In both cases, all students were exposed to literary devices and grammer. Juarez Myers, a senior, said his favorite part of English was, "The poetry lessons because it brings out talents I never thought I had." While many would agree that poetry is their favorite part of English, they would also agree that grammer was one of the least favorite aspects of the subject.

Although the teachers tried to incorporate simple techniques to learn a complex things, students had to find a way to comprehend it themselves. Jacky Williams said, "I learn the most by visuals on the board and constant practice." English was a fundamental part of high school education, which was why every student had to take is all four years.

Camilla 'Hawthorne and her classmates work, diligently in their IB English class. "English is alot of work, but I enjoy the class," said Hawthorne. Not only was she in IB, she was also an active member of Speech and Debate, Journalism and NHS.

Nicole Perata actively participates in Mr. Barney's English Advanced Placement class. When asked about her English teacher, she said, "I think he's cool and hecka funny." Perata participated in AP classes to prepare for college.

Ronnie Lodetti and Amber Williams debate in their AP US History class. Lodettie stated, "Debating is hard becuase you have to think on you feet." Debating is a skill that will help students express their ideas more clearly.

Blast from the Past

History class offered the chance to explore exotic lands and beautiful cultures, and study the places we have always dreamed of. Some of us did this in our dreams while we slept through boreing lectures while other actually paid attention to the teacher. Everyone had different opinions of history class. "My least favorite part of history is the long lectures." said Kristina Nestlerode, whose view was widely agreed upon by many students.

If so many students thought of history as naptime then why was it a required class? Mai Tran said, "It's because you don't want to repeat the horrible, horrible things people have done." The hours of history really did teach us about the consequences of the past and the effect it had on the future.

Was it the voice of the teacher that drove us to sleep or was it cramming 2000 years of history into 40 weeks? It was the teacher that made the difference between sitting in history and actually learning history. When asked what was the best way to learn history, Don McMullan said, "I learn the most if the teacher explains the subject thoroughly and makes it clear what they are talking about." History was an adventure that started in Ancient Egypt and ended in the deep jungles of Vietnam. Students also learned about our own country's government and economy. No matter if we liked it or not, history helped change our view of the world around us.

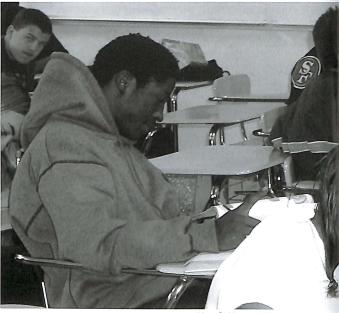

Alex Fuentes takes notes in his International Bacculaureate history class. "The hardest part of history is getting all the facts and chronological order."

Mr. Burke works on the board while lecturing his World Civ class. "I enjoy teaching motivated students," said Mr.

Justin Sanga finds that it is easy to pay attention when sitting in the front row of Mrs. Tomko's third period Geometry class. "I like Geometry because it deals with shapes," commented Justin.

Cordell Burnside learns how to write theorems and formulas in Mr.Webber's thrid period Algebra I class. "I like Algebra because it's easy and I understand how to do it right." said Burnside.

ABC, easy as I 2 3!

Mrs. Oakley and Mr.Molumby taught Math Methods, the new addition to the math department. "Math Methods includes calculus, number theory, advanced algebra, vector geometry, and problem solving." commented
Mrs.Oakley. Math Methods was an International Bacculaureate requirement.

By the time students entered high school they all knew what 2+2 equaled! High school math demanded that students go beyond the limits of simple arithmetic. In algebra class, it was confusing to see letters of the alphabet mixed in with the equltions, however Sylvia Avalos thought differently. "Algebra I was my favorite math class because it actually made sense," said Avalos. Although math was a hard

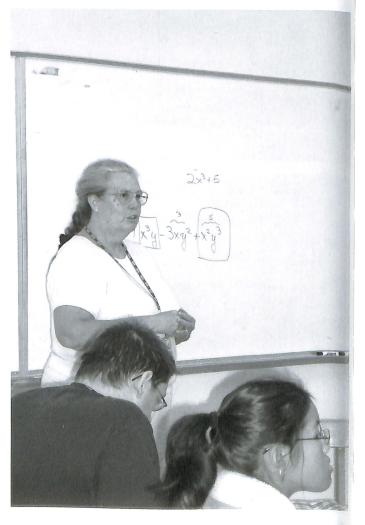

Although math was a hard subject for some, teenagers knew it would help them succeed in the future. "Math helps solve problems everywhere you go. I think everyone needs a little math to get through life," commented Mrs.Sands.

Mr.Molumby and

Mrs.Oakley taught Math Methods and Math Studies for the first time. These classes were IB math courses that had never been taught before. "It's a different kind of math and it's more challenging then other math classes!" Andrew Toolson replied very enthusiastically.

The first year of high school students either took Algebra I or Geometry. Fuey Saeturn took Geometry Honors and commented "Geometry Honors is quick and effective-and we don't go over review material." Although students thought Geometry was difficult, they also got to do alot of projects that made class fun.

Algebra I was a very important class if students wanted to advance furthur in math. Jon Pascabillo stated "I like it, when I do it right, because it feels like I accomplished something, and it helps you make calculations mentally instead of struggling to use a calculator."

Larressha Cook writes down important observations during a physical science experiment. "We're finally doing work!" exclaimed Cook. Her friend, Leah Lewis, helped.

Jessica Chaney helps Heather Johnson measure a distance while Nikki Dean writes it down. When asked what was the hardest thing about conducting experiments, Johnson stated, "I have a hard time keeping all the data in order."

Mr. Mitchell's class collects data as Nick Anzalone races a bike down a path for a science experiment. Anzalone was inspired by his science teacher to do well in science. Anzalone stated, "Mr. Mitchell rocks, man!"

A World of Wonders

Science is one of the most important forms of studies. Without science, we would still think that the Earth is flat and that we are the center of the universe. The world would be filled with superstitious beliefs and nothing would have a reasonable explanation. Many people would still be dying from easily treatable illnesses such as the flue, chicken pox and the common cold! Thank goodness for science!

Before students could conduct science experiments, teachers reveiwed the fundamentals such as the scientific method, the metric system, and the use of graphs and tables. Once students knew the basics, they better understood some of the more complex concepts. "I like chemistry because you get to experiment with different chemicals and see how they work with each other," said Teresa Busey. Chemistry experiments involved testing dangerous chemicals, so students had to be especially careful. They had to wear close-toed shoes and wear goofy-looking goggles. Girls had to pull their hair back, much to their dismay, and showers were in each of the lab rooms just in case someone caught on fire!

From the tiny cells of the human body to the huge formations of galaxies far, far away, students learned that science was involved in every aspect of life. Over time, science has has evolved alot but we still don't know everything. "I like Astronomy," said sophomore, Camberlyn Dobos. "Cause we don't know much about it and it's mysterious." Astronomy is one field of study that not much is known, but scientists are making advancements all the time. Maybe someday students will be taking science classes on Mars!

Say it a Little Louder Now

These students take great interest in the language that they study. Spanish is hard for some people, but not for Ty'relle Harris. "I took Spanish because it's different from all other languages," said Harris.

Bonjour! Comment ta'lli vous?

¿Hola, como estas?

Hallo! Wie geht's?

If you know what any of these phrases mean, then you probably studied a foreign language. Foreign language allowed students to learn about other cultures, but more importantly, they discovered that teenagers all around the world had alot in common. Why did students choose the language they did? One student, sophomore Anna Mcdonald, explained why she took French. "I wanted to learn a language that alot of other people really didn't know. Plus it seemed interesting."

The students that were in French and Spanish spent all year developing their accents and writing skills. They worked diligently becuase that knew that in the end they would be rewarded for all of their efforts. During the week off of school, for spring break, students were given the chance of a lifetime to go to France or Spain, depending on what language class they were in. Students taking French traveled to Paris, Normandy, Lorie Valley, the D-Day Beaches, Mont-St.-Michel, St. Malo, and Monet's Garden. The Spanish speakers hopped on an "el avion" and flew to Spain where they visited Madrid, Costa Del Sol, and the Canary Islands. A trip to a different country; isn't that incentive enough to study a foreign language?

Abe Silverio, now in his forth year of spanish, is considered by many to be fluent in the language. "Spanish is interesting and I am begining to use it in my everyday language," said Silverio.

David Parkinson raises his hand in spanish class. "I chose spanish because I thought it would be more useful to me," said Parkinson.

"Computers teaches us what we need to know," said Emiliy Miller a freshmen, who took the computer applications class.

Making the Connection

Everyone used computers to do their book reports, labs or just to surf the internet. As Katherine Sickles said, "Computers are a way of life and you can't live without them." Most everyone took the required computer applications course, which taught typing, computer programming, and the basic computer components. To some, computer class was a breeze, since they already knew the basics. To others, especially to those who did not have a computer at home, it was a huge challenge.

It was important that everyone have the knowledge of the basic computer in order to succeed in school and beyond. Typing for many was the not the easiest thing in the world. For others, it was just as easy as talking on the phone. "The one thing that helped me in computer class was typing," said Amy Householder, a sophomore. She took her basic computer class her freshmen year, "I type faster now."

Typing was not the only thing computer class was about. In Mr. Keisling's computer art and media class, students learned specific skills such as making digital videos and editing them on the computer. Students learned how to dub the videos with sound and create animations. What made this possible was all the expensive equipment. This included headphones, high-speed computers, and fancy video and digital cameras. It was the same equipment that many professionals were using. "Most of all we enjoyed working with Mr. Keisling."said Michael Breiz, "a freshmen.

Mr. Summers' Computer Applications class spends the first two months of the year learning how to improve typing skills and technique. "Typing is really, really hard," said Sara Gomez.

Computer Applications is a class that students are required to take in order to graduate from high school. This is because computers are widely used in business affairs, the economy, and many other aspects of today's

Way Ahead of the Game

The students that were in Advanced Placement (AP), AVID, Honors, and International Baccalaureate (IB) programs dedicated alot of time to their education becuase their main goal was to get into a good college. These students took on a huge task by entering these special college prepratory classes. This meant more time hitting the books instead of hanging out on the weekends.

Mrs. Evans, a history teacher for the AP program, stated that in order to be in an Advanced Placement class, "Students must be self disciplined and motivated." Evans also said. "It is a rigorous course with a lot of homework." In May, students to the AP test which, if they passed, would waiver many college credits. The AP tests were very hard and students spents weeks studying for them. Students were prepared to carry a much heavier backpack when they took AP classes.

For the students who didn't want a bigger book but wanted to do something to work towards collage, they joined AVID. AVID was a program where you could learn more about college. "The reason why I joined," sophomore Angela Libran said,

"was because I knew I could have a better chance at getting into a college." The students also got tips on what classes they needed in order to get into the college of their choice.

International Baccalaureate was a program that pushed students to their limit. Not only did IB students have to take hard classes but they also had to do community service and write a 4,000 word essay! Vanessa Reyes said, "I went into pre-IB because I knew that if I worked hard, I could earn college credits." The students that joined IB had to take a test before their freshmen year in two different areas; math and poetry. You could always tell which students were IB because when you asked them what they did over the weekend they said, "Oh! I studied."

Other students, like sophomore Shaunæ Elmer, wanted a challenge in the areas that they excelled in, so they chose Honors courses. "My english and math classes were just too easy," Elmer said. "So I took Honors English and Algebra II." The Honors classes were more challenging than regular classes, but not challenging enough to be classified as IB.

Kim Harlow carefully pours chemicals during a lab. "Whorking with chemicals is intersting," said Harlow, "That is why I like chemistry." In chemistry, you always have to take the right precautions when working with chemicals.

A tutor in AVID teaches Angelle Brown about how to solve atough math problem. "Math is sometimes hard," said Brown, "But that is why I like working with the tutors." Brown took algebra during her sophomore year.

Jennifer Goza works in a group to discuss a novel in IB English.

AVID students work with each other and their tutors to answer questions.

Mr. Vujovich

Mr.Vujovich became vice principal three years ago. Students go to Mr. "V" whenever they have questions and he is always very responsive to their concerns. "My role as a vice principal is to assist Mr.Vaccaro and to make sure we meet our state standards, which keeps me close to the classrooms."

Mr.Gregg

Before becoming a vice principal, Mr.Gregg was a computer teacher for twenty-three years. "I was in a dream job being a teacher at Armijo". Most students know Mr. Gregg for walking around campus, checking that everyone was wearing their I.D. badges.

Mr. Vaccaro

Mr. Vaccaro was a great principal because students felt that he was always looking out for their best interests. However, many students did not realize just how much he did for the school. As the principal he had many opinions, goals and aspirations. "Having the responsibility of being the principal is a 24-7 job for me." Academic achievement for the students was number one on his list of priorities but he also enjoyed student activities: "I like football and basketball season." A main concern on campus was safety for everyone and respect for the campus. "One of my goals is to maintain a safe environment." With all the goals that he set and achieved, it is no wonder that the students had a great year.

Mrs. Addision

Mrs. Addision believed that being a vice principal meant having an impact on the success of students. "My favorite part of the year is the end of school, when the students in the senior class reach their goals"

Mr. Dietrich

As a vice principal, Mr.Dietrich worked hard to have a friendly, productive, and safe environment. "Armijo provides an academic program for students of all ability levels and interests."

The ORGANIZERS were the members of clubs who bettered both the school and the community. This meant they played the Game of Armijo with purpose and compassion for others. The presidents of these clubs had many duties that ranged from managing the school newspaper to serving and feeding the homeless. These were difficult tasks because it took a lot of effort to organize a group of people and have them focus on the same goal. In order to be successful at their endeavors, each club had to have passion and drive. Each time the members accomplished a given task they boosted school pride and contributed to the communitys morale. The ORGANIZERS were invaluable players in the game of Armijo because they possessed the courage to make a difference and were not afraid to change the path that they were assigned to travel.

Students train to become leaders with the spirit of National Pride

The top four commanders salute to the camera. "I'm grateful that this program exists because now I have the confidence to 'aim high' for my future," said Gerisa Macale. As the year went by, ROTC progressed more and more skills.

Ever wonder what R.O.T.C stands for? R.O.T.C stands for Reserved Officer Training Corps. It was designed to help those who wanted to learn how to do certain commands and drills. "The options to me by being in this class gave me plenty of choices for deciding what to do for my future" said Jose Sim, '04 who held the position of Vice Group Commander.

This year, R.O.T.C also had competitions and sports tournaments, which included volleyball, basketball, and bowling. Michael Beltran explained, "The best thing about being on a R.O.T.C sport team is that if you mess up, it doesn't matter because people are willing to help you get better at it."

Gerisa Macale:
"I am currently

Students learn more about themselves by finding the Value in others

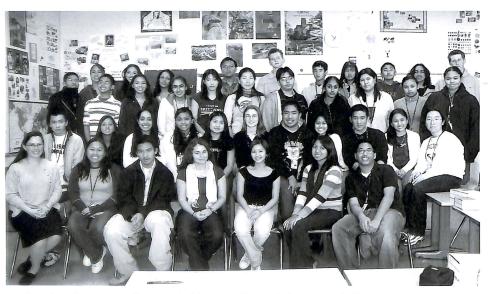

Junior Sarah Drake, an active member of Christians on Campus, quotes the bible to show others one of her views of the world.

The schoolyard was full of diversity. Everyone portrayed different ethnic, religious and social backgrounds, each in their own way. AFS was a club that focused on hosting foreign exchange students and providing them a place to make them feel more at home. The members of the club helped introduce the foreign exchange students to American culture. Clubs also connected with the world in other ways such as the International Club, which focused on international relations. Christians on Campus united Christians, focused on God and spread the word of God to people throughout the school. "At the meetings we pray, worship, fellowship with each other and do skits," said Somer Sparks. The world was, in a sense, wrapped up in the students.

putting on well thought out performances. They were all about pleasing the crowd though their dancing and working together as a team. They performed at basketball halftimes, the DECA talent show, the Zwanzaa Celebration, and various rallies. In Drama, the members learned how to take their emotions and put them into the characters that they played on stage. For example, Amy Chavez explained why she joined the Drama club. #### Having a Way with Words Scrabble is a game that definitely has a way with words.

Many students came together in a variety of clubs to practice their ability with words. Whether it was making words, debating interesting topics, expressing their opinions about the politics of the world or creating a newspaper for our school to enjoy, all had the opportunities to have a way with words. The Scrabble Club met once a week during lunch to play scrabble. Another great club that was an exciting way to spend your time was Junior Statesmen, where students met to discuss politics and their opinions. The Junior Statesmen not only met at school, but also traveled to conferences around the state. Speech & Debate was a great club to join for learning how to effectively speak in front of an audience. and even debate against someone else and get your point across. Kaye Santos said "I enjoy the fact that it is a professional event but extremely fun. It is really challenging and I like to verbally spar with people." Journalism was not only a club: it was a group of dedicated students who produced an excellent newspaper every month for the entire student body to read.

Students succeed on the Fast Track to the Business World

Working with business technological advances, knowing how to operate company was important for better job opportunities. Fortunately, clubs like WIT, VICA and DECA were available to any student who wanted to know more about the world of computers and business.

Women in Technology was not easy, and with the new (WIT) was a club which focused on helping young girls learn more about advanced computer technology. DECA was a club where business opportunities were available and work skills were achieved. VICA focused on computer hardware and learned how to build their own computers from scratch.

Treasurer Sulki Flake checked work hours in the Student store. "Deca taught me everything I know about marketing and how a business is run. I ran for treasurer because | wanted to be a part of making decisions on the behalf of Deca."

Students lead school spirit while marching to their own tune

Andrea Arango and Shayla Beck T.A. for Mr. Trottier, the band director.

The school band was a symbol of school pride, which was clearly demonstrated at rallies, spirit marches, and sporting events. When students heard the sounds of Indian Chant around campus they quickly became energized. The mood of the student body on big game days was primarily dependant on the band.

To be in the band it took a lot of practice. Members would spend after school hours marching back and forth across the empty parking lot. Other students woke up early for zero period Jazz band practice.

The Band nurtured the students interest in music and transformed countless students into talented musicians.

Promoting spirit and altruism for the leaders of tomorrow

Besides academic achievement, the goal of Armijo High was to also infuse leadership into the future generation. Leadership on campus was jam-packed full of dedicated students who woredk together for the common good. But this year there were many changes. Leadership developed an elite system of accepting members. The members were chosen through an interviewing and application process. This new method gave members to more duties for the year.

"Leadership is a very sucessful program with its changes," said Nicole Dean. A new addition to Leadership was its advisor, Mr. Miller. Many of the activities on campus like Homecoming games, rallies.

Dances and Powder puff was hosted through Leadership. "Seeing the homecoming float and dance come together after I helped put it together was a great feeling," said

Ashley Hugus. Not only did Leadership host school festivities, but they performed community service as well. A couple of service projects they attended were the Blood Drive on campus, Angel Tree (to sponsor the less fortunate for the holiday season), and Deck the Halls (also during the holiday season for the elderly care homes). Each class in Leadership was handed a responsibility and required to host fundraisers.

"Organizing Leadership activities takes a lot of responsibility and dedication, and I enjoy participating," said Jacy Burroughs.

Hands-on experiences teach students valuable lessons

Working with wood, tools and occasionally animals, is what members of the Construction club, and FFA are all about. In FFA, (Future Farmers of America) their objectives are to develop premier leadership, personal growth, and to encourage improvement in scholarship. In FFA, the members did plenty of activities throughout the year including car washes, and going to the State Fair and Dixon May Fair. Most people joined FFA to lead Dixon May Fair. Most people joined FFA to learn about agriculture, but not Brian Peterson. "I joined because all of the rest of my family has been in it," Peterson said. "I also like to go to the fairs because you get to show off the animal that you raised."

Another group of people who liked getting down and dirty was the Construction club. The Construction club was about doing community projects, and prepared students to enter the trades. The projects that they did in included: Habitat for Humanity and built 6 by 8 storage buildings for fundraising money. They even had Barbeques and a spring baseball game.

Students expand their minds while making new friends

Academic Decathlon was a class for students who wanted to compete in the Solano County, CA State, and USAD Decathlon. "I basically joined this class, because I thought it would be a good challenge for me" said sophomore Katie Hall. Academic Decathlon had county competitions and a State Competition.

Gate Club was a club, which students joined for the academic challenge. It was designed for students who were interested in the science field. "I would recommend this club for anyone, because it helps you enhance your skills for science" said freshmen Patdy Saechao.

No, they do not make Keys, Key Club stands for "Kiwanis Educate Youth." As a very active club on campus it joined together freshman, sophomores, juniors and seniors in a casual, friendly, and fun manner while building leaders for a better tomorrow. "From Key Club I gained a new perspective of community service. Its not just picking up trash, it involves helping people," said Vicky Ma. Armijo Key Club, sponsored by Kiwanis of Fairfield, worked together with many projects. The newest addition to work with Kiwanis was The Senior Citizen's Prom at The Loyalton in Rancho Solano "The Senior Prom was an excellent example of students willing and excited to do community service for those that danced or even just spoke with the senior citizens, left with a tingly feeling inside of us," said Benjamin Davini. Some of the excursions in the school year included the Regional Training Conference and District Convention. "RTC was fun because we met up with peole from all around Northern California," said Stephanie Flowers. Here they met fellow members all around the district, learned more about the KCI's structure, performed a service project while having fun. There were dances and social hours plus the adventure of the destination. On campus Key Club hosted the Talent Show. Showcasing many of the talented people here at school while donating the funds to other non-profit organizations.

"Yearbook is my life!!!"

Seniors, Lindsay Wray and Kristin Young, have been "Yearbook-ers" since their eighth grade year at Sullivan Middle School. On the Indians' staff since sophomores, "Zo and Zay" have worked well together over the years.
"I love Lindz-Binz...she's my hero!" said Young. It was Wray who encouraged Kristin to join late in her sophomore year, and she would not have had it any other way.

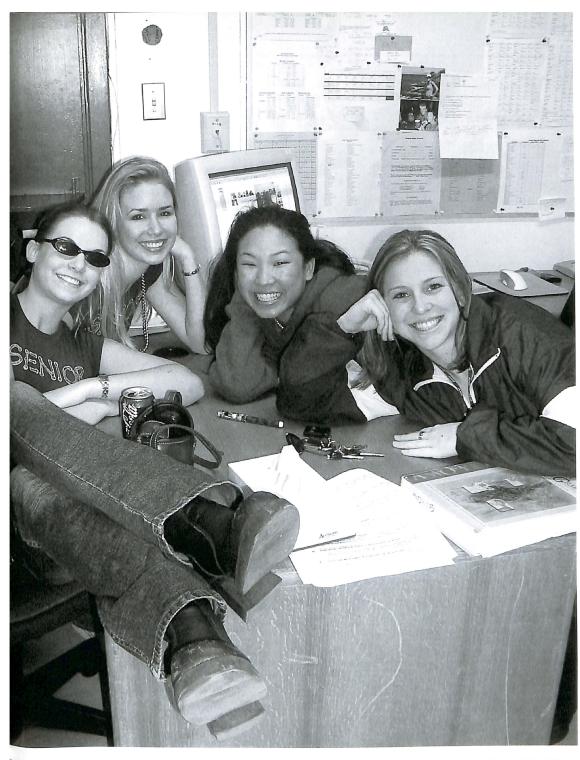

Working hard in the yearbook office, these four senior girls were so productive. "I have no problem, except for these cameras, " said Corinne, the one responsible for the 8 pictures the four girls had to take. Corinne has an obsessive compulsive blinking disorder, thus the sunglasses.

Senior Editors: Alysia Porter, Ciara Anzalone, and Corinne DeLorenzo. Sports Editor: Stephanie Munson. People Editor: Leah Ebanez. Academics/Clubs Editors: Amanda Bautista and Trishia Pascabillo.

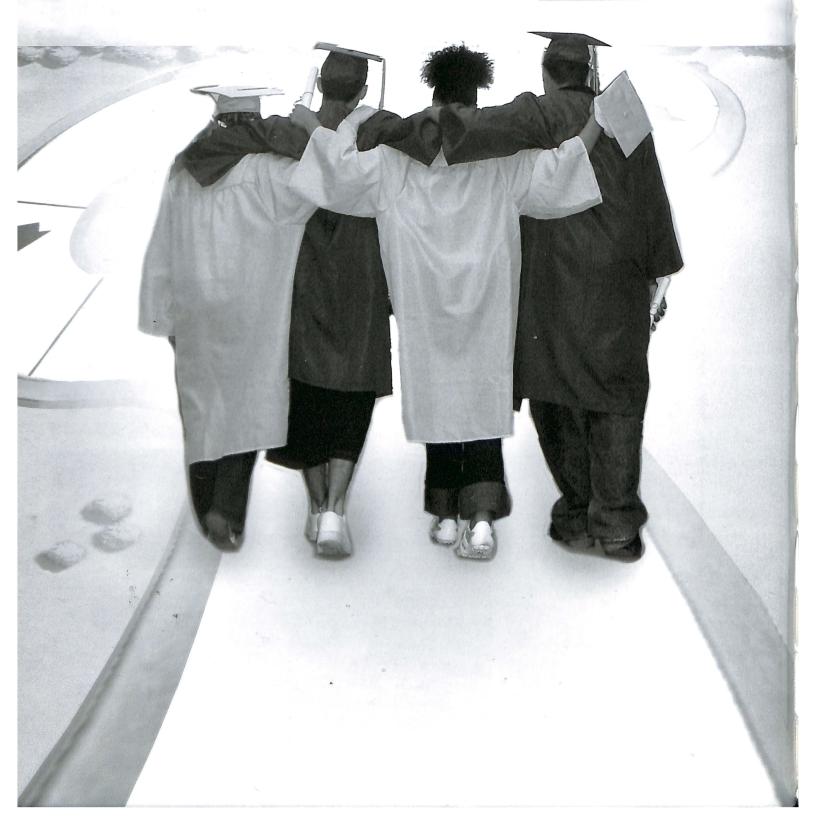

Editors for next year's book, Megan Bacigalupi and Melissa Ferenthiel, speak to Mr. Miller about theme ideas. "It's exciting to be in charge next year because it's a chance to make the yearbook your own," Bacigalupi said. This was the two friends' first year in the yearbook class.

Remember how our whole class was so close in fifth grade? Remember middle school and all the new friends we made? Remember the after school dances? Remember A.R. Reading? Remember all the softball games? Remember freshmen year and how nervous we were? Remember how you spilled your soda on Ty at dinner? Remember how I made you try out for cheerleading? Remember our drivers ed. courses and our first behind the wheel? WOOWEEE!! Remember all the homecoming floats, the dances, he stress, the homework, and the drama (stupid boys)? Remember the sleepover "study sessions?" Remember when we stayed in on a FRIDAY NIGHT because you were grounded...and we did homework? Remember how successful prom was? Remember all the A's games? Remember our Senior year? I am so glad to have been able to share all these memories with you, and remember, I will always be your friend. Love Always ... Ci P.S. My Friends...oh The IB gang. There isn't much to say but they're great. Through our friendship I have learned so much. For four years we have been building a bond in which I pray lasts a liftime. Though some people come and go, these friends shall stay forever. We have countless inside codes, and hidden names four matter, it's the memories behind them. The memories of us being together and always being there for each other were mischievous. These shall stay with me forever! A want to thank all of you for your friendship. You guys have blessed me greatly and I will always remember how you louched my life. Now as college approaches and we go our separate ways may life

My Dearest Friends.

I offen try to refrain from thinking of the future. Yet, I know that inevitable date is upon us. I know that we will part as we leave to turn out dreams into goals. And I know that I will cherish all the years we had together as some of the more precious in my life. I was, am, and will continue to be happy because I know that no matter where we go or what we do, we will always be friends. What binds us, after all, is true friendship, love more powerful than whatever will try to destroy what has now been forged in the fire of fights, hardened and cooled in the waters of laughs and smiles, and sheathed in memories. This bond of ours is like a diamond chain, and we will defeat whatever tries to break it. And what problems face and conquer them From the Forever Flamboyant Friend,

ROACOA! theid ULGGU

No matter what anyone says my high school years have been great. I loved every minute, from our late might escapades, to all our inside jokes, and all the parties. No matter where we go, we always manage to have a great time. Through it all, even the fights, we've managed to remain friends. Some of our members have gone but new ones have come in. Kristin, Alexis, and Precious can never be forgottlen because of the marks they've made on our lives, but neither Michele, Kiersten, or Meisha who have replaced those that left, will be forgottlen. Weve all grown together and changed together mainly for the good. As we've grown we've become closer sometimes we already know what the other person is thinking, and can just look at them to communicate a message. As college comes closer and threatens to breakup our group all (can do is hope we will stay close. Things are changing and will never be the same, but I will salways remember all of our fun escapades together and all our jokes. I'm never going to forget you guys and will always love you.

Stephanie Lanza

Stephanie, From Kindergarten to High School Graduate, we are so very proud of you. The next chapter of your life is about to begin, remember your dreams can come true. You know we love you and will always be there for you! Contragulations and good luck! All our Love, Mom, Dad, Tori & Ricky

Melissa Henry

From the very first moment that we laid eyes on you, we knew that you were a very special child of Christ, a loving spirit. At 4 pounds, and 2 months premature, you made such a great impression on us. You have never ceased to amaze us with your outstanding determination and enthusiasm. You have filled our world with joy and music since your birth. We are very proud of you, not only because of your accomplishments at such a young age, but who you are. Any path in life is at your command, keep your goals in sight, you have our total support.

Ciara Anzalone and Kristin Young

Ciara.

How quickly time goes by: Not long ago we peered through the incubator window with concern about your health and future. Though born 7 weeks early, you were full of spunk - kicking your heals, jabbering, and rarely sleeping... continuously on the go. Those first few months with you were just a glimpse of who you have become. We are amazed at how little sleep you seem to need, and how many activities you can cram into one day:

You are an awesome blessing in our lives. We have enjoyed the years of watching you play softball, perform with the color guard at Sullivan, and cheer for the Armijo Indians. We've also had the privilege of seeing you grow spiritually; and we have been proud of you, as you have shown strength, character, and leadership as you resisted peer pressure. Thank you for being such a sweet sister and a great example to Nick. You have filled our lives with a joy beyond comprehension, and we thank God for you everyday.

And now, as you begin a new chapter in your life, we just want you to know that we love you and we will always be here to support you as you navigate through the adventures ahead:

Love, Dad, Mom, and Nick accomplish many goals. Through it all, you have shown integrity, strength, compassion and faith. You have been a gift and blessing from God! Now it's time for us to let go and watch you from a distance; traveling the next journey of your life. We know that whichever college you choose to attend, you will succeed because the definition of success for you is not material wealth or status quo. What defines you are the same four characteristics you have shown throughout high school. Integrity, living the truth...strength, standing up for the truth even if you must stand alone...compassion, understanding that others may not be able to see the truth...and your faith in God, knowing that He will always bring you to the truth;

We can't believe that graduation is already momma dropped you off in front of Armijo on your first day of school and yelled out the window, "Hey freshman"!! You have watched you learn many lessons and grown so much the last four years! We've here! It seems like yesterday when these ingredients will be your success.

so very proud of you Biskit! Congrats graduate, class of 2004:11

May God continue to guide you through the next adventure...we love you and are

An enormous THANKS to the Armijo teachers, coaches, and staff for giving our four sons and us many great years and many wonderful memories!

From: Lory & Judy Engell, Armijo Class of 1975

Ashley Michell

From Diaper to Diploma Ashley

Class of 2000

My beauiful "Ash-the-Dash" It seems like yesterday, you were this little kid with big ponytails, now you're here "graduating in 04." Words cannot describe how incredibly proud Rachel and I are of you.

Remember to always aim very high, and grasp at every challenging, positive accomplishment that comes your way.

We love you, Mom & Rachel

Ross,

Four years of high school passed so quickly. The adventure of life will continue on the path you choose. We have no doubt that you will excel.

We love you, Dad, Mom, and Kristen

Colophon

This year the theme of our book was The Game of Armijo. The point of theme was to illustrate that life is like a game; with set backs, diversions, obstacles, shortcuts, and triumphs. The way we play the game in high school represents the way we will play the game for the rest of our lives. The co-editors developed the concept. The book was 272 pages long: 65 pages of 4-process color, 8 pages of spot color, and 199 pages of black and white pages. Herff Jones produced 1150 copies of our book in Logan, Utah and our job number was 7042. The price of our book ranged from $50-$70, depending upon the date that it was purchased. Our Herff Jones representative was Deana Kuhlman, whose hard work was greatly appreciated. The cover, index, and dividers were designed by editors, Lindsay Wray and Kristin Young, and our Herff Jones artist, Robin Beadles. Any duplication of ideas or omissions was not intentional. The fonts we used were: AHJ Ad Lib, AHJ Platinum Blonde, AHJ Jurasaki, AHJ Sunken, AHJ Typewriter for headlines and AHJ Glytus, AHJ Chantilly for captions and stories. Collegate Photography in Vacaville, California took the senior portraits and underclassmen mug shots. This book was composed of digital pictures and photos developed by Photos To Go in Fairfield, California.

We owe much gratitude and appreciation to all those who contributed to production of this well-assembled book. Thank you to the faculty and administration for all their support and encouragement. We appreciated all the teachers who allowed us to interview their students, as well as the administrators for supporting our creativity throughout the duration of this yearbook's production.

We would like to extend our gratitude to Deana Kuhlman, our Herff Jones representative. She was extremely patient and supportive during our deadlines, and kept us on track during the production of this yearbook. Thanks to our great staff for their cooperation and hard-working attitudes.

Last, but certainly not least—a tremendous thank you to our wonderful, out-of-this-world, fantastic, terrific, superb, fabulous, brilliant, gracious, goofy, affable, understanding, and dynamic advisor Mr. Graig Miller. This game would not have been made possible without his creativity, motivation, and sporadic pieces of advice on this game we call life. This book will always remind us of "OURmijo."

As fellow players in "The Game of Armijo," we would like to dedicate this yearbook to the Class of 2004. Always remember that in the game of life we are not defined by the end result. What really matters is who you are as a person and how you choose to play the game.
